Louis Beats Tommy Farr By Decision, Keeps Title

35,000 Spectators Boo Unanimous Ruling for Champion.

Both Battlers Take Heavy Punishment

Welshman's Gameness Before Bomber Upsets Dope.

By Jack Paulus,
Sports Editor of The Post.

Tommy Farr, the man whom the dreaded "Brown Bomber" couldn't knock out, the 12-1 underdog whom experts rated another sacrifice for a Mike Jacobs holiday, stood across the ring and cried.

For Tommy believed he had beaten the champion. And thousands of fans, crowded in Yankee Stadium agreed with him. The decision, unanimous one, was loudly booed. The huge crowd stood on its feet, and for full ten minutes following the announcement, hooted the decision. The sound, an ominous one, came out of the great depths of this mammoth oval like the roar of an avalanche, the deep, dark sound of the sea.

And Tommy stood and cried. "You won," his handlers told him. But Tommy heard the announcer's words through ears that took everything that Louis had to give and saw through blood-smeared eyes the emblamatic gold belt fastened around his adversary's waist.

Hard Decision.

It was a hard decision to make. No one in that huge crowd would have cared to take the responsibility of rendering it. Championships aren't lost by fights such as this one tonight turned out to be. True, Tommy stayed the distance, and took everything the Dark Destroyer could offer, and hurt Joe in return—but it takes more than that to win a championship. Farr was a great fighter tonight, greater than anyone in the stadium probably thought he would be. But he was hardly a champion.

The Welshman carried the fight to Louis as he promised he would He often left himself wide open—just to land one effective punch. And it was probably because Louis looked little like a champion tonight that Farr wasn't knocked out. He was on the verge of it in that eventful seventh round when Louis finally seemed to click. But the Louis speed wasn't there, and the Louis eye wasn't true. The champion, and everyone else in the stadium, after that seventh knew that Farr was not to be knocked out.

Plenty of Courage.

The Welshman's greatest attribute was his courage—the courage that weathered those early murderous Louis left hooks, the courage that carried him over into the eighth round. His eyes two gory patches, his nose and mouth dripping with blood, his stomach reddened by the telling force of the Brown Bomber's left, Farr kept coming again and again. Louis pelted him with rights and lefts, he drove him into the ropes, he bombed him across the ring twice, but Farr kept coming back.

Farr convinced Louis early that this was to be a fight. He seemed to forget that he was fighting the dreaded "Brown Bomber," the man whose slightest tap made Baer and Levinsky and Carnera collapse. And Louis seemed to forget that he was the champion. He looked like a bewildered boy, a lad who met up with something he couldn't quite fathom. He was a puzzled, tired and frightened boy.

Louis started in his cool, calm, conventional manner. He gave the

'16 Guild Strikers Sue A. F. L. Chiefs

Army Making 300,000 Doses Of First Pneumonia Vaccine For Tests on CCC Enrollees

Drug May Give Immunity Against Ills Which Take 50,000 Lives a Year; Only Volunteers Injected.

An antipneumonia campaign carried on quietly for four years with thousands of CCC recruits as voluntary "guinea pigs' became known here yesterday.

Col. Joseph F. Siler, head of the Army Medical School, confirmed reports that the Army has begun to prepare 300,000 doses of pneumonia vaccine developed by Dr. Lloyd D. Felton, formerly of Harvard, and now attached to the Johns Hopkins University Medical School. His discovery is a complex chemical compound utilizing the pneumococcus antigen, or antibody. It has been given more than 50,000 CCC enrollees with encouraging results.

Pneumonia now takes more than 100,000 lives annually. About half these cases would be affected by the new vaccine. Blood sera have been perfected for use in treatment, including one by Dr. Felton, but until now, at least, there has been no vaccine.

Dr. Felton, who is on leave from his research laboratory in Baltimore, has made no claims for his vaccine, pending its use on a great scale under controlled conditions.

Vaccination will be voluntary, not compulsory, in the Civilian Conservation Corps, Col. Siler said. The thousands of recruits who have received "shots"—only one is necessary—during the last four years were encamped principally in New England and West Coast States.

Dr. Felton is reported to have preferred the CCC for mass experiment purposes because the youths can be kept under observation for fairly long priods.

A few persons besides CCC

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 30.—President Roosevelt today signed the Byrnes bill providing for the first governmental count of the unemployed.

The enumeration, to be completed before April 1, will be undertaken through a system of voluntary registration, as favored by the President, rather than by employment of a vast army of census-takers to make a house-to-house canvass as in the decennial population counts.

The cost of a census of the unemployed has been estimated at about $4,000,000. Instead, present facilities of the Postoffice Department are expected to be used.

The administering agency will be the Secretaries of Commerce and Labor, the Works Progress administrator, the director of the Census Bureau and the head of the Central Statistical Board.

During the day the President disposed of four more minor bills, three by pocket veto; signed a half a dozen commissions and went for a drive about the countryside.

He still held up action on the sugar and housing bills.

He signed the commission of Murray W. Latimer, of New York, as a member of the Railroad Retirement Board.

Another bill he approved provides for addition of certain lands to the Fort Donnelson National Military Park in Tennessee.

He vetoed a house bill which authorized a per capita payment of $25 to members of the Redlake band of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota from proceeds of the sale of timber and lumber on the Red Lake reservation.

The other vetoes were of private relief bills.

Only Those Co-operating in Program to Get Federal Aid.

By Robert C. Albright.

Fulfilling an Administration compact with Congress, the Commodity Credit Corporation yesterday announced Government loans of 9 cents a pound on cotton, with discount differentials for lower grades.

The loans will go only to farmers who agree sight unseen to comply with and participate in a 1938 crop adjustment program temporarily shelved at the last session. Congress promised to give right-of-way to the crop control measure when it next meets.

In further relief of the falling cotton market, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday announced terms of "cotton price adjustment payment plan" assuring farmers of an ultimate 12 cents for their cotton through a subsidy arrangement with the Government.

Contingent on Co-operation.

The proposed subsidy, which in no case would exceed 3 cents a pound, likewise was contingent on co-operation in the 1938 program. Upon "proof of compliance" with the as yet unenacted farm program, farmers will be paid the difference between 12 cents a pound and the average price of ⅞-inch middling cotton on the ten spot markets, on the day the farmer sells.

Cardinal Bisleti, Pope's Aide And Seminaries Head, Dies

The death of the venerable prelate who, as dean of the cardinal-deacons, announced the election of Pope Pius XI in 1922, deeply affected the pontiff.

The Cardinal, in addition to being a Prince of the Church, was a nobleman by birth. He was a member of the noble family of the Marchesi Bisleti.

Born in Veroli, March 20, 1856, he studied in the Tivoli College and then at Capranico College, Rome. From there he passed to the Academy of the Ecclesiastical Nobles, where he was graduated in philosophy and theology.

In 1884 Pope Leo XIII, who had occasion to estimate and appreciate the talents of the young noble priest, made him his secret chamberlain, a position Bisleti held for 16 years. Then he became master of the chamber.

When Pius X came to the papal throne, he promoted Bisleti to the position of majordomo but let him also retain the duties of master of the chamber.

Mgr. Bisleti held these positions until November 17, 1911, when he was created cardinal-deacon.

Equal Justice In Auto Cases Sought Here

Trade Board May Back Campaign to Obtain Co-ordination.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A move to install uniform and impartial penalties for traffic offenders in the District was reported yesterday after recent efforts to secure co-ordination in a definite traffic control and safety program apparently collapsed in Police Court.

The Washington Board of Trade, it was learned, will be asked to support a plan to revise the present alternating system of judges in traffic court. Indorsement of a policy to seat one judge for all traffic cases also will be sought from other civic and business groups, it was said.

Under the present system, it was pointed out, fines and penalties differ with the individual judges. Traffic officials are seeking uniform set of penalties for specific types of violations.

Brown Seeks Co-operation.

With deaths, injuries and property damage still on the increase in spite of safety efforts, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, is attempting to secure co-operation from courts and city prosecutors.

Lack of co-ordination, however, was revealed by two cases in Police Court yesterday. One involved a woman arrested Sunday on charges of hit-and-run and driving while intoxicated.

After leaving a cocktail party, the woman allegedly sideswiped six parked automobiles and was apprehended only after a chase by police. She was released in bond of $1,000 for a scheduled appearance in court yesterday.

The woman, however, failed to appear. Behind closed doors in the assistant corporation counsel's office, the case was continued "indefinitely." A promise had been made to "settle the damage," it was reported.

Reluctant to discuss the case, attaches of the prosecutor's office "didn't know" when the woman would be brought to trial.

U. S. Lawyer Is Counsel.

A member of the assistant United States attorney's office—located in Police Court—is the accused woman's lawyer during his hours of private practice, it was further learned.

Another indication that police and prosecutors are apparently working at odds was revealed in the case of a young man arrested for reckless driving. After a chase at breakneck speed—during which the fleeing motorist zig-zagged through heavy traffic and passed a red light—police found he had been drinking.

In spite of testimony to this effect, an assistant corporation counsel reduced the reckless driving charge to driving on the wrong side of the street and passing a light. The fine was $14. The maximum penalty for reckless driving is $100, 30 days in jail or both.

"We have attempted for some time to find out why charges of this type are decreased before the case reaches court," said M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director, yesterday. "Without co-operation by courts and prosecutors, all our safety efforts are wasted."

Fines Vary with Judges.

Under current arrangements, a speeder may be fined $5 by one judge, and a driver charged with the same offense may receive a $25 fine at the hands of another.

Those who have studied Washington's traffic problem agree that public and judicial co-operation are important factors in reducing accidents and curbing recklessness.

To curb this menace, it has been pointed out, the motoring public must first agree to co-operate. Any refusal to co-operate then becomes a problem for the police and courts, experts say.

Wife of President Writes to Cheer Jobless Partisan

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—John Smiuski, arrested in 1935 for ripping caricatures of the Roosevelt family from an art exhibit, was taken to Flushing Hospital a week ago when he collapsed on the street after being out of work sometime.

Today he received a letter from Mrs. Roosevelt which said: "I am writing to say that I hope you will keep your courage. You have my best wishes for an early recovery, when I hope you will be able to find employment."

Chinese Envoy Condemns Japan For 'Barbarism' in Speech Here

Dr. Wang Says Foe Bombs Helpless, Machine-Guns Weak and Wantonly Destroys Property in Undeclared War.

Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, last night assailed Japan's "ruthless tactics" in the Far East and branded its methods of conducting warfare " a throw-back to barbarism."

"Japan does not war on Chinese soldiers alone," he said. "She wars on civilians. She bombs the helpless. She machine-guns the weak. Her methods are ruthless. In less than two months she has slaughtered thousands of noncombatants; has wantonly destroyed property.

"I have only one word to describe her disregard for rules hitherto honored in combat—that word is 'barbarism.'"

The Ambassador spoke at a benefit dinner at the Lotus Restaurant for China's war refugees, sponsored by the Chinese Women's Association. More than 600 attended, including many prominent Washingtonians.

Dr. Wang defended the recently signed Sino-Russian non-aggression pact on the ground that "collective security is the only road to peace." And he assured his audience that "China will never lose heart, no matter how great our sacrifices may be."

An all-Chinese program followed the dinner. The Chinese national anthem was sung by a sextet, including the Misses Am Iu Wang, Lois Ing, Anna May Ing and Chen, Mrs. Wy and Mrs. Hsuch. Nine-year-old Miss Muriel Lee played the piano.

Jerusalem, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Military commanders considered martial law when tension between Jews and Arabs hourly grew more critical tonight.

Postoffice Clerks To 'Resist' C.I.O.

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 30 (AP).—President John J. Barrett, of New York, told the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks convention here today it has no fear of John L. Lewis' C. I. O.

Barrett said members have been deluged with propaganda urging them to join the Postal Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate.

"We have no fear of John Lewis," he said, "and we will resist any effort on the part of him or any other of his henchmen to raid our ranks. We are going to retain our independent status. We pledge allegiance to no one except the Government of the United States."

N. Y. Cab Employers Bar 800 As Nonunion Men

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Hundreds of New York taxis were held in garages today as the result of a dispute between employers and the Transport Workers Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, over the enforcement of a closed-shop agreement made a month ago.

Employers barred 800 drivers from their cabs on the ground they were not paid-up union members.

Stern Protest Lodged; Two Refugee Ships Turned Back.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Lodging a sternly worded protest with the Chinese government at Nanking over the reportedly accidental bombing of the United States Dollar liner, President Hoover in the China Sea yesterday, American officials temporarily, at least, halted the evacuation of their nationals from Shanghai by means of commercial vessels.

Word was received here that Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the American Asiatic fleet and in charge of this country's interests at Shanghai, had released the Dollar Line from an agreement to have its liners, the damaged President Hoover and the President McKinley, make Shanghai a port of call for the purpose of removing American refugees.

Yarnell waved both vessels off to Kobe, Japan. Dollar Line officials are anxious to keep their vessels out of the troubled zone around Shanghai, but at the request of American authorities they agreed to direct the liners, President Hoover and President McKinley, as well as other vessels in their fleet, to call at Shanghai. It was while on this mission that the President Hoover was damaged by bombs admittedly dropped by Chinese aviators.

Ready to Evacuate 2,000.

Whether it is Yarnell's purpose to release the Dollar Line from its promise to have vessels other than the Hoover and McKinley call at Shanghai was not known here. The naval commander has been instructed to use his discretion and take whatever steps he regards as necessary to safeguard American lives and interests. It was thought he would be guided by conditions in Shanghai in making further use of the Dollar liners.

Naval officials, however, made preparations to evacuate the 2,000 Americans remaining in Shanghai in the event of an emergency. Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday stated there were sufficient American naval vessels in Chinese waters to remove all the Americans at Shanghai should that become necessary.

Keeping American-flag ships out of the Chinese danger zone would greatly lessen the chances of this Government becoming further involved in the Sino-Japanese conflict. Unless the neutrality act were invoked—and there is no sign of that yet—this Government could

Shanghai, Aug. 31 (AP).—The heavy guns of the Japanese fleet in the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers crashed into action at dawn today in what appeared to be the prelude of Japan's big push against the Chinese lines encircling Shanghai. Most of the fire was directed at the Woosang forts at the confluence of the rivers.

Shanghai, (Tuesday), Aug. 31.—The United States today was drawn deeper into the Sino-Japanese conflict by the Chinese bombing of the $8,000,000 luxury liner President Hoover, flagship of the United States Dollar Line fleet in the Pacific and one of the newest and largest passenger liners plying to the Orient.

[One of the ten wounded died today of leg and stomach wounds, the Associated Press reported. He was S. Haskell, a member of the crew.]

At the same time, the Japanese launched a mighty land, sea and air attack on Chinese divisions still in the Shanghai area and claimed they had surrounded 3,000 or more Chinese soldiers at the north of the Whangpoo River, "who willl be captured or annihilated."

Ultimate objective of the Japanese drive was believed to be China's central capital, Nanking, a walled city of more than 800,000 population, 160 miles west of Shanghai.

Two Japanese planes were shot down near Canton, South China's principal city, after an early morning raid in which two dud bombs were dropped on the Chinese military airdrome at the outskirts of the city. Chines planes drove off the attackers.

The first of Japanese planes droned over Canton at 6 a. m. on what was at first believed to be a reconnaissance flight. Two of the planes were caught in fire from anti-aircraft batteries and were shot down.

Bombs Injure Ten Americans.

Chinese military aviators, who said they mistook the American refugee ship for a Japanese army transport, hurled four bombs at the President Hoover, starting at 5:40 p. m. yesterday.

Three explosives hit the ship. Besides Haskell, at least nine Americans were injured, including six members of the crew, one of them seriously, and three passengers.

[The Associated Press reported the injured were:

[Passengers:

[E. Ruffner, scalp wound.

[G. Whitfield, leg wound.

[J. Cowen, arm wound.

[J. Kulik, chest and leg wounds.

[R. Cordero, head injuries.]

Four Chinese planes participated in the attack.

Japanese destroyers, which raced to the scene of the bombing, 20 miles off the Yangtze lightship, on the high seas, reported one of the bombs blasted a hole 25 feet in diameter in the Hoover's steel deck.

The liner was due in Kobe, Japan,

Six From Nazi 'Typhoid Ship' Located Here, Escape Disease

Six persons have been found in Washington who disembarked Friday from the typhoid-ridden German liner Hansa, the District Health Department disclosed yesterday.

"But none of them has come down with the disease so far," said Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the bureau of preventable diseases.

Four of the six are permanent residents of the Capital and the others are here temporarily, he declared. Reading in the newspapers that Health Officer George C. Ruhland desired, as a public health precaution, to hear from all persons in the District who left the Hansa Friday, four of them went to his office and the other two telephoned their whereabouts.

None has shown any symptoms as yet, Dr. Cumming said, but all have been asked to keep themselves under strict observation. The incubation period of typhoid fever, he explained, is from 7 to 12 days.

Two of them have been vaccinated for typhoid fever, so that their chances of being infected are almost nil. All were informed of the disease's symptoms, so that they would lose no time in obtaining medical aid if they become ill.

One member of the group, Dr. Cumming said, is a housewife who cooks for a large family. She was advised to stay out of the kitchen until time "clears" her.

Dr. Cumming emphasized, however, that the Hansa's crew accounted for every one of the 29 cases which were discovered after the vessel docked and that the disease apparently was spread from the seamen's galley or living quarters, which are entirely separate from passengers' accommodations.

600,000 Ship Workers, Goal Of C.I.O. Drive

Leaders to Fight Proposed Legislation to Curtail Strike Rights.

By the United Press.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Maritime union leaders tonight began a drive to organize the Nation's 600,000 marine workers into one C. I. O. union and announced vigorous opposition to legislation curtailing their right to strike.

Twenty-one union officials from the Pacific Coast, Atlantic Coast, the Gulf and the Great Lakes attended the initial conference, called to plan for amalgamating all present United States maritime unions into a national industrial maritime federation under leadership of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Coincident with their meeting came reports from Washington that Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the United States Maritime Commission, had ordered commission experts to draft legislation similar to the Federal railway labor act, which requires mediation before a strike.

"We'll fight," said Joseph Curran, general organizer of the National Maritime Union. "We want no statute like the railway labor act. It permits this stalling along so as to defeat the railway workers of this country in their demands for better working conditions and higher pay."

He referred to the wage dispute between railway executives and the "big five" operating brotherhoods, in process of mediation by the National Mediation Board.

The meeting today was called by the C. I. O.'s maritime committee of seven, headed by John Brophy, executive C. I. O. director.

Easton Defies Green.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 30 (AP).—President John B. Easton, of the State Federation of Labor, told William Green and the A. F. of L. executive council tonight he had no intention of standing trial for failure of his group to oust C. I. O. unions.

Easton wired Green at Atlantic City, where the State leader had been summoned "for trial" tomorrow: "Our only defense . . . should we appear in person, would be the practices of the federation in the past and the plans of the future unanimously met with the approval of the delegates in the convention."

Soviet Workers Urged to Attain New Output Peak

Moscow, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Stakhanovites, Russia's high-production workers, were urged today to make their second anniversary an incentive for new output peaks in lagging factories and mines.

Pravda, the Communist Party organ, declared the productivity of Russia's labor rose 22 per cent last year under the impetus of the Stakhanovite movement. It lamented, however, that the average worker's output still is below that of workers in "most advanced capitalist countries."

Just two years ago a young, unknown coal miner, Alexei Stakhanoff, celebrated international youth day by establishing a Russian record for coal output—102 tons in six hours. Officials seized upon his achievement to dramatize their pleas for greater farm and factory production. Stakhanovism became a nation-wide slogan and mark of honor.

American Foundry Head Paid $67,564

President Charles Hardy of the American Car & Foundry Co., received $67,564 in 1936, a report filed with the Securities Exchange Commission showed yesterday.

S. S. Kresge, president of Kresge Dapartment Stores, Inc., received $12,000 in 1936. J. J. Hasley, vice president and general manager, received $24,001 and Samuel Marks, assistant secretary and merchandise manager, $25,276.

The J. E. Case Co., of Racine, Wis., reported L. R. Clausen, president, received $30,000 during 1936. W. L. Clark, a vice president, received $25,499, and Theodore Johnson, secretary, $21,500.

The Electric Auto-Light Co., of Toledo, showed R. G. Martin, president and manager, received $60,000 anual compensation starting May 1, 1936.

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials said yesterday they probably would ask Congress in January for at least $450,000 to employ more than 100 new tax investigators to handle thousands of additional tax returns. The present force of 3,000 was described as insufficient.

Authorities expressed confidence the extra agents would bring in tax collections far surpassing the sums they receive in salaries.

By Franklyn Waltman

WITH announcements yesterday that the Government will lend 9 cents a pound on this year's cotton crop and will pay a subsidy not in excess of 3 cents a pound to make up the difference between the producer's selling price and 12 cents, we have again launched forth on another adventure in national planning.

The details of this latest Don Quixote adventure deserve close attention because it means a great deal to the country—far more, may it be said, than the $130,000,000 or more of the taxpayer's money, which in all probability will be paid to the cotton planters. It is the beginning of another experiment in seeking to control crops and again, apparently having learned little from our last attempt, we are headed straight toward another Bankhead compulsion law.

WALTMAN

But it may mean more than that—it may mean the final blow to the South through the destruction of world markets for cotton, a development set in motion by Herbert Hoover's Federal Farm Board and one which steadily has advanced ever since, being accelerated by the Utopian AAA schemes.

All that, however, is in the future, and therefore falls into the twilight zone of speculation and prophecy. There is nothing hazy, however, about the obligation which the Federal Treasury has assumed to the cotton planters.

It came about, it will be recalled, through a political putsch on the part of Southern Senators in the closing days of the last Congress. It did not emanate from the brain trust or with the experts of the Department of Agriculture. They have been sour on the scheme from the beginning. Consequently, the scheme, instead or being grounded in sound economics, springs from political expediency.

Cotton production this year shot substantially upward, with the crop being estimated in the neighborhood of 15,000,000 bales. Some of this increase was due to increased acreage planted as the AAA restraints were lifted. A part of this total increase, however, was due to the fact that nature has smiled on the South and this has been a good crop year. Average yield per acre increased.

As a result, prices early in the summer commenced dropping. Educated by the Roosevelt Administration to believe that prices are the only real important thing, that total income is not so important, the Southern planters commenced letting out yells of protest. Whenever Government undertakes to persuade a people it is solely responsible for sunlight and increased prices, it must face the responsibility for price decreases and for the rain and the drought.

The Southern yells of protest caused spontaneous action on Capitol Hill. The cotton bloc urged that the Government peg the falling price by setting a Government loan figure. The pressure on the White House increased. Some of the Administration's cotton experts knew only too well what a dangerous course of action was being suggested.

Another factor entered the situation. Mr. Roosevelt wished reenactment of some form of crop control legislation. Congress was not inclined to give it to him—indeed seemed unable to agree on any one plan. So Mr. Roosevelt undertook to strike a bargain. He said he would agree to cotton loans if Congress agreed to pass a crop control bill when it reconvened.

But he made the pact more ironclad by inserting into it, as a supplement to the loan scheme, a subsidy scheme. It works like this: The producer who sells his cotton this year for, say, 9 cents a pound, saves his sales slips. If he signs up with the Government next year and agrees to reduce his acreage he will be entitled to a subsidy, on this year's cotton, of approximately 3 cents a pound on 65 per cent of his 1937 base cotton production.

If no crop control legislation is adopted there will be no payments under that scheme. Hence, there is certain to be crop control legislation. Mr. Roosevelt has the Southern cotton bloc members on Capitol Hill exactly where he wants them—all they can do is rubber-stamp any farm plan he sends to them, unless they wish to take their political lives in their hands by depriving their constituents of money on the barrel head. Without doubt it is one of the most brazen efforts at government by bribery of the citizen ever attempted in this country.

But there is another aspect to this situation. If $130,000,000 can be set aside as a subsidy for cotton planters as the result of a political putsch, what is going to happen when wheat prices slip downward? Why, without doubt the grain belt bloc on Capitol Hill will stage a political putsch and $100,000,000 or so will be set aside for their benefit. And then comes the question of discrimination. Why not subsidize the dairy interests with another $50,000,000? It is fine for all these classes, but, as in the case of young James Cromwell's theory of negative interest, what happens to the Treasury, to budget-balancing and to the taxpayers?

The ironic thing about this cotton subsidy plan is that the $130,000,000 will come from a fund set aside in the Agriculture Department to encourage the export of American farm products. But, if experience is a reliable teacher, it will have the ultimate effect of discouraging cotton exports. But more about that later.

Session Spent 10¼ Billions, Taber Claims

House Republican Leader Predicts $3,000,000,000 More Debt.

Warning of a deficit "anywhere between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000" and an increase in the national debt of "at least $3,000,000,000," Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, yesterday estimated outlays voted last Congress at $10,252,892,556.

Taber's figures topped by more than $900,000,000 preliminary estimates by Chairman Carter Glass, of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Chairman Clarence Cannon, of the House Appropriations Committee, who recently predicted a balanced budget in 1939, is still working on his analysis of the session's spending record. It is expected to fall $1,000,000,000 below the Taber total.

Apparently in answer to the Cannon budget forecast, Taber lashed out at the high level of appropriations and declared "there is never going to be any way out financially for this Government" as long as present fiscal policies are continued. He said a balanced budget would require practically $3,000,000,000 in additional revenue, if the present spending rate is continued.

"Each year we have been told that it was absolutely unnecessary for this country to increase taxes and yet every year since the Roosevelt Administratoin began there has been a bill increasing taxes substantially," Taber said.

"No taxes have been started and abandoned after they were started. We are promised in the tax bill that is to be considered at the next session in November or in January, another increase which will raise $200,000,000 or $300,000,000, but with the spending program that has been inaugurated, our Government cannot balance its budget with a tax bill that will raise only from $50,000,000 to $300,000,000.

The partisan battle of estimates is an annual occurrence at the Capitol, but this year it foreshadowed a Republican attempt at a comeback in next year's congressional elections, with New Deal spending as a certain issue.

Senator Glass was the first out with a set of estimates, fixing the session's estimates at nearly $9,400,000,000, as opposed to $10,336,399,272 last year. But the Virginian pointed out this session's figure would exceed the last if the $2,237,000,000 bonus payment was excluded from last year's outlay.

Taber claimed last year's figure was exceeded by $123,000,000, without eliminating the bonus. In addition to his $10,252,892,556 total, including permanent and reappropriations, he said there was upwards of $250,000,000 in contract obligations, and some $4,000,000 provided in private acts.

All Spent by June 30.

"The worst part of the present situation," Taber said, "is that practically all of the funds appropriated in this session of Congress will have been spent by June 30, 1938."

Taber declared the net national debt this year is $38,590,293,658. He said the gross debt as of June 30, 1937, was $36,424,000,000, "and including the guarantees the gross debt was practically $42,000,000,000." He estimated New Deal expenditures since March 4, 1933, at $35,000,000,000.

The New Yorker also struck at increasing personal costs, and supplied a tabular statement of the growth in the number of employes since 1936. He said employes on the pay roll at the present time "exceeds 845,000," which he said was "an increase since the Roosevelt Administration came into power, of 275,000."

Only Those Co-operating in Program to Get Federal Aid.

poration immediately announced a $150,000,000 loan to the Commodity Credit Corporation to enable it to make the cotton loans. Secretary Wallace announced the price adjustment subsidy will be financed by $130,000,000 in customs receipts made available by Congress.

The 9-cent loan maximum was a disappointment to Southern Senators who recommended a 10-cent minimum loan to the President, but a victory for Secretary Wallace, who had held out for 9 cents, "questioning the desirability of making loans above the market."

The announcement appeared favorably received in New York cotton circles, where it was interpreted as a conservative program that should aid the crop's movement to market.

Throughout the day the New York cotton market had moved irregularly, as traders awaited announcement of the loan terms. But the downward trend of the last few weeks had continued. October futures, which had sold at 9.50 on Saturday, closed at 9.32-33 just before the announcement. December futures closed at 9.33.

The cotton subsidy arrangement was written into the third deficiency bill at the last minute by Congress, on motion of Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina. Before this, a Government loan pledge had been made to a congressional delegation by the President, in return for a promise of privileged status next session for his crop adjustment program.

Termed Contract.

Both Houses by resolution agreed to make the farm program first order of business when it next meets. The President signed the resolution. Wallace interpreted this as "almost a contract" to enact the farm plan next year. He said it made it "the sense of Congress that a permanent farm program should be enacted as soon as possible after Congress reconvenes."

Both Wallace and the President want to make surplus control fully effective on 1938 crops, and the Agriculture Secretary favors calling Congress back before January to guarantee this. Meantime, the Senate Agriculture Committee will frame its own bill. Sub-committees will tour the West and the South between September 30 and October 29. They plan to meet here in early November to draft a bill. Agriculture commissioners of 13 Southern States will meet in Memphis on Friday to consider the proposed legislation.

In its formal cotton loan announcement yesterday, the Commodity Credit Corporation disclosed it "will lend to producers of the 1937 crop 9 cents per pound on cotton classing ⅞-inch middling cotton, or better; 8 cents per pound on cotton classing 13-16-inch in staple, and middling or better in grade; 7¾ cents per pound on cotton classing ⅞-inch as to staple but under middling as to grade.

"No loan will be made on ⅞-inch cotton or better in staple which is of a grade not deliverable on contract under the regulations of the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges and no loan will be made on 13-16 inch cotton under middling grade."

Establishment of a smaller loan rate for certain low grades was interpreted as an effort by the Government to prevent overloading of the poorer grades on a basis materially above market value.

To Mature in 1938.

The cotton loans, bearing a 4 per cent interest rate, will mature July 31, 1938. Officials said they would be available "not later than September 15." Farmers seeking loan relief must store their cotton in warehouses approved by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The loan arrangement is optional to farmers seeking the subsidy. If the price of cotton goes well above the 9-cent loan level, the farmer may decide to sell his cotton on the market. This farmer would retain his sales slip, and when he proved his compliance with the 1938 crop-control program, would receive from the Government the difference between 12 cents and the average price on the 10 spot cotton markets on the day that he sold. But in no case would the subsidy exceed 3 cents.

A farmer who sought loan relief could later claim the subsidy as well, if the price his cotton brought when sold from the warehouse was below 12 cents. But this also would be contingent on his agreement to co-operate in the new program. The effect of the loan program, in connection with the subsidy, is virtually to fix a domestic price of 12 cents a pound.

U. S. Board Decision Due Soon On $3,000,000 Mellon Tax Suit

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals probably will hand down a decision in a month or so on the Government's $3,000,000 claim for additional taxes on Andrew W. Mellon's 1931 income.

The claim has been before the board more than two years. Evidence is being sifted by trial examiners, who are expected to report findings shortly. The board will take several weeks after that to decide. The decision can be contested in the courts either by the Treasury or the Mellon estate.

Officials said the financier's death made no change in the case.

Independent of the pending litigation, Treasury authorities reported they would make a "routine examination" of Mellon's educational and charitable trust, to which he left his fortune.

If the Treasury should determine the trust is a bona fide charitable organization, authorities said there would be no Federal taxes.

The trust was certified by the Internal Revenue Bureau as a nontaxable organization shortly after its formation in 1930. This certification was revoked when Mellon transferred more than $50,000,000 worth of paintings to the trust. The bureau held then there was no assurance the paintings would be given to charity or to the public.

Afterward, Mellon gave the paintings to the Government, and they will hang in a national art gallery now under construction here.

Officials said informally this gift probably would make the trust a bona-fide, nontaxable charitable organization.

Meantime, efforts to collect $415,983 of additional income taxes from Mellon interests met resistance yesterday. The Koppers Co., Pittsburgh, and seven other Mellon-controlled corporations apealed to the Board of Tax Appeals against deficiency assessments laid on them by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Koppers was assessed $46,210 as transferee of the Aden company, and $46,219 as transferee of the Burma company for the period from October 27 through December 31, 1932.

The seven other companies asked for redetermination of $46,222 deficiencies assessed on each for the same period.

Mellon Trust Named.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30 (AP).—Paul Mellon, scholarly son of Andrew W. Mellon, will help carry out his father's wish that the bulk of his vast personal fortune be spent for the improvement of mankind.

Young Mellon, his brother-in-law, David K. E. Bruce, and Donald A. Shepard, his father's attorney, were named today as trustees of the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust.

The great financier granted them full discretionary powers under terms of a deed of trust filed with the county recorder. The deed provided for the administration of one of the largest charitable trusts in the world—rivaling the famed Rockefeller Foundation.

Bingham Calls Recall Rumors 'Nonsensical'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 30.—Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to England, said today that rumors he would not return to England were "nonsensical."

"I'm going to be here two to three weeks, then I'll go back to my job," he said.

"I will go to Washington to see Secretary Hull at 11:30 tomorrow morning at the State Department and while I am there I will make an appointment to see the President. Then I'll visit my family and go back to London."

Bingham spent a week-end here with Dr. Hugh H. Young, whom he described as "an old friend."

Recall Rumor in London.

London, Aug. 30 (AP).—The departure last week of Ambassador Robert Worth Bingham for the United States impelled speculation today in the British press.

Reynold's News declared informed sources in both Washington and London believed the envoy would be replaced by Joseph E. Davies, Ambassador to Soviet Russia.

Davies Friends Doubtful.

Moscow, Aug. 30 (AP).—Friends of Joseph E. Davies, ambassador to Soviet Russia, considered it doubtful today he would be transferred to London.

Hull Expecting Call.

By the Associated Press.

State Department officials said yesterday Ambassador Robert W. Bingham probably would come to Washington soon for "a routine call" on Secretary Hull. They said the Ambassador had no definite appointment but probably would "drop in."

$5,000 Men Score With Imagination, Study Indicates

Minneapolis, Aug. 30 (AP).—The quality of imagination was found to be the only difference between 100 men who made $5,000 a year all through the depression and 100 who didn't make over $35 a week, in a study reported today to the American Association of Applied and Professional Psychology by Dr. F. L. Wells, of the Psychology Laboratory, Boston.

He said that in four different intelligence and personality tests the two groups rated virtually equal, but that when asked what should be done in an unexpected emergency the $5,000-a-year men gave better answers.

Super-Nova, Brighter Than Sun, Discovered

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 30 (AP).—Discovery of a bright super-Nova with a luminosity estimated at 500,000,000 times that of the sun was announced tonight at Mount Wilson Observatory.

The phenomenon was discovered two days ago by Dr. Fitz Zmucky at Palomar Observatory and confirmed at Mount Wilson. The exploding star was located in a "dwarf" stellar system, some 3,000,000 light-years from the earth.

Holt Assails Lewis' Third-Party Talk

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, said yesterday John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., was boasting publicly of third party possibilities to force President Roosevelt to "warm up" to him.

Lewis "is smarting under the failure of the executive to recognize him as the leader of the labor movement and resents the invitations of Hillman and Green to the White House," the Senator said.

Prepare to Quit Fascist Spain, French Warned

Short-Notice Evacuation Considered by Franco as Retaliation.

By the Associated Press.

Saint Jean-de-Luz, France, Aug. 30.—Spanish insurgent sources said today all French residents had been warned to be ready to leave insurgent Spanish territory on 24 hours' notice.

Insurgent Generalissimo Franco was reported to be considering the expulsion of all Frenchmen in retaliation for France's action in ousting a group of Spanish insurgents living along the French Basque coast.

French police ordered out nine Spanish insurgents August 18 and indicated there would be other expulsions.

The action was taken after what was termed the "kidnaping" of a Spanish government oil tanker in French waters by young insurgents and other purported evidence of illegal insurgent activity in France.

Siege Is Tightened.

Madrid, Aug. 30 (AP).—Government forces tightened their siege of insurgent-held Belchite tonight in preparation for a general offensive to drive a steel wedge between Zaragoza and Teruel, most important insurgent strongholds on the Aragon front.

In a series of smashing attacks, government soldiers forced insurgents to withdraw from their mountain positions around Belchite, 20 miles south of Zaragoza.

Veteran defenders of Madrid were moving in large numbers from this former capital of government Spain to attack the western flank of the Teruel salient.

Traffic Fatalities Show 12% Increase In Seven Months

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Motor vehicles killed 2,270 more persons during the first seven months of this year than in the same period of 1936, the National Safety Council reported today.

An increased motor mileage in July was accompanied by an increase in traffic fatalities and 3,420 persons died on streets and highways.

Va. Oil Salesmen Enjoined by SEC

The Securities Commission reported yesterday it had obtained a permanent injunction in Federal District Court at Harrisonburg, Va., to prevent certain practices by three men in sale of oil royalty securities.

The men were listed by the commission as Walter P. Spielberger, described as an "Oklahoma oil royalty promoter;" Roland H. Spielberger and C. E. Wheeler, listed as Walter Spielberger's associates.

The commission, in its bill of complaint, charged the men had made misrepresentations in the sale of securities in a petroleum trust and other properties in Oklahoma.

Farley Withholds Mahoney Approval

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley looked over the New York political situation briefly today, but did not voice the indorsement of the pro-New Deal mayoralty candidate, which had been expected for some Jeremiah T. Mahoney, which had been expected for some days.

"No comment at this time," was all he would say. It was said, however, he probably would return to the city next week.

Mahoney is the choice of the Democratic leaders of four New York City boroughs—Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens and Richmond—against Senator Royal S. Copeland, the anti-New Deal mayoralty designee of Tammany Hall.

Bruised Baby Fell, Father Suggests

While his son, Albert Kennel, jr., 14 months, was recovering from head injuries yesterday in Gallinger Hospital, the father, charged with assault, tried to tell how his baby was hurt.

"I came home and found my wife was out," he said. "I got to brooding about it and the baby began to cry. I gave the baby a spanking. I didn't hit him around the head. His crib was open and he may have fallen."

The father was held at the Eleventh Precinct to face an assault charge this morning in Police Court.

Hot Weather to Delay Oyster Season in D.C.; Scarcity of Crop Expected to Boost Prices

'R' Month Eating Season Given Jolt by Sea-food Experts.

Although the "r" months will get into full swing Wednesday, it will be at least two weeks before Washington can consider its oyster season opened, old-timers on the waterfront declared yesterday.

Samples brought in have convinced experts that "the water has been too hot" for oyster fattening. So far seafood houses are not selling bivalves.

"I don't serve my customers oysters yet, 'r' month or no 'r' month," said Fred Gisler, manager of Herzog's.

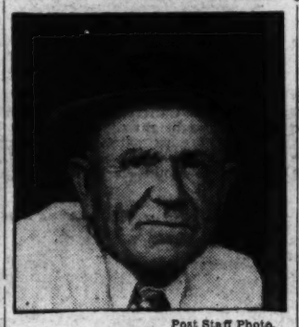

"My shippers tell me that I do not want them yet. They sent me in some to sample and thus far they are not right."

Also, the prices may be higher this year. Capt. J. L. Wake, skipper of the Thelma W., and Capt. J. R. Jackson of the Olive-Virginia, both seasoned oyster dealers, declared that the delicacy is scarce along the Rappahannock.

"We won't be back here with oysters before the middle of September, and it looks as if the price will be up. We don't know about the Potomac crop, but the crop down our way is scarce," they said last night.

Both the captains and everybody else along the waterfront hoot at the idea that oysters should not be eaten in May, June, July and August.

"They should be eaten any time you can get them, but the only trouble is that the big beds do not have good oysters until the water gets cooler. There are always a few good oysters, if you are on the water where you can get them."

CAP'N. J. L. WAKE. He has no oysters—."

W. L. O'Connor, health inspector assigned to the wharf, said that some of the best oysters were gathered in the summer. Capt. Wake admitted he knew lots of places where spring streams flow into the Rappahannock "and there are fat oysters in the hottest months."

Wharfmaster J. H. Smith said that approximately 20,000 bushels of oysters were brought into Washington on boats last season and that they brought from $1 to $1.50 per bushel. As a usual thing, December is the best oyster month here, but last year November was.

Samples Show Bivalves Have Not Fattened Properly.

"Depends on the weather. The river froze in December and then in February there were such storms we did not have any boats coming in at all," he said.

The wharfmaster joined with the health inspectors and many oyster dealers in lamenting the havoc wrought by the oyster-canning practice. In their opinion, people who have never purchased a bushel of oysters "as is," taken them into a shucking shed and had them shucked before their eyes, do not know what a real oyster is.

Health officials have prepared for the 1937 season by reminding oystermen of the rigid sanitary conditions that must be met, both by packers and others engaged in the business.

Jersey City Boys Again Halt Traffic In Plea for Parks

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 30 (AP).—The revolt of the 10-year-olds for more playgrounds broke out anew today as barricades made from cobble-stones once again blocked traffic and police squads dispersed taunting youngsters.

For the second time in a week the children erected walls blocking city streets, and in two separate sorties strewed smashed milk bottles on the pavements. Traffic was halted until emergency police cleared the area.

D. C. Police Turn Cowboys in Hunt For Stolen Cattle

A big cow hunt was under way last night in Washington as police took the trail again after earlier rounding up a runaway horse.

Two cows belonging to a La Plata, Md., farmer are missing. The sheriff, suspecting cattle "rustlers," asked for Metropolitan aid.

"Get me my boots and saddle," squad car men might have called as the flash from La Platta came to headquarters. All cars were on the lookout for a white dehorned Holstein and a brown Jersey, each weighing 900 pounds.

Japanese Drive Into Shantung From Tientsin

Invading Rich Area While Two Columns Converge North of Nankow.

By H. O. Thompson.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

With the Japanese Army South of Tientsin, Aug. 30.—I slogged through the mud with barrel-chested Japanese infantrymen today along the Tientsin-Pukow-Nanking Railway to watch them launch one of the major campaigns of this war—an invasion of historic Shantung Province, one of the richest areas in China.

Their first objective is the capture of the walled town of Machang, an important railway junction about 17 miles south of Tientsin, to gain control of a branch line which leads from that point to Taku, one of the down-river ports of Tientsin.

The Japanese units are veterans who have been drilled for years in North China fighting.

The Japanese columns are advancing on all fronts in North China, one army moving northward to effect a juncture with the Kwantung army unit, which bored through Chahar and captured Kalgan.

The southern column, driving through from Hualai, near the Great Wall pass at Nankow, will drive northward to meet the Kwantung troops, thus clearing the vast area from Pingsui to Kalgan and from Pinghan beyond to Lianghsiang, according to Japanese claims.

5 Americans Cleared Of Cuban Arms Charge

Santiago, Cuba, Aug. 30 (AP).—Five United States citizens and nine British subjects, arrested by Cuban authorities after they fled from a native uprising in the Bahamas, were acquitted here today of possessing war materials.

They landed on the Cuban coast after a hazardous voyage from Great Inagua Island, the Bahamas, with rifles, pistols, gas guns and several thousand rounds of ammunition. The Cubans charged them with illegal possession of the arms and they were jailed.

Amateur Astronomers Choose Nagy President

Stephen Nagy, 104 C street northeast, was elected president of the new National Capital Amateur Astronomers' Association at a meeting Sunday night at the United States Naval Observatory.

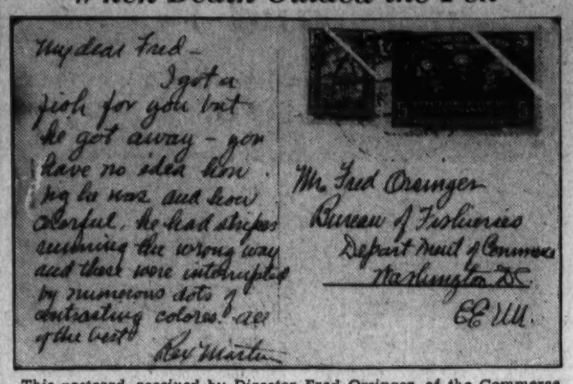

Other officers included U. S. Lyons, associate astronomer at the observatory, vice president; Mrs. Earl Ruth, secretary, and R. C. Masters, treasurer. The group will meet again Friday to draft a charter and by-laws. It has approximately 75 members, drawn together by a common interest in the Finsler comet.

When Death Guided the Pen

This postcard, received by Director Fred Orsinger, of the Commerce Department Aquarium, was mailed by his friend, Rex Martin, only a few hours before he and 13 others crashed to death in an airliner near Cristobal, Canal Zone, on August 2. Martin was Latin-American adviser of the Bureau of Air Commerce and its former assistant director. None of the bodies has been found.

Only the Female Mosquitoes Bite, Suffering Experts Learn

The next time a mosquito lands on your epidermis for luncheon, you can say with accuracy: "Drat that female."

For, the mate mosquito is not fitted for piercing, but the females have a set of needlelike organs with which to puncture the skin.

After years of patient and painful study, entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture have some interesting facts to report about the habits and customs of the insects.

Do you know, for instance, that—

Salt-water marsh mosquitoes are strong fliers? The department's study has determined them capable of winging their way 20 to 25 miles from the hatching grounds?

Some mosquitoes live a long time as insect lives go—two to three months?

Stagnant swamps are not the only breeding grounds for the insects. That auto tire you threw away, or that junk heap in your backyard are admirable breeding places for the mosquito. Incidentally, as Dr. F. C. Bishop, of the department, pointed out, although the advent of the auto reduced the house fly breeding (as it heralded the passing of the horse) it has tended to increase the mosquito problem.

The biting habit is not a sadistic trait. Most of the common species of mosquito must have a blood diet to aid in the hatching process.

In most species the eggs are laid on the surface of stagnant water, often in raftlike masses. The larvae (called wigglers from their peculiar motions in swimming) are aquatic but come to the surface to breathe. The pupa, or intermediary stage before the wiggler becomes a menace, is from four to seven days. It is really Lent for the embryonic mosquito—he is on a rigid fast during that period.

Dark-colored clothing is more inviting than white, and the majority of mosquitoes are night flyers.

The department's strangest collection is a colony of mosquitoes. And for six years now, three employes have performed the unsung feat of submitting bared arms to the insects.

Dr. Bishopp admitted the process was painful at first; less painful as the human guinea-pigs became immune.

Army Testing 1st Pneumonia Vaccine on CCC

300,000 Doses Prepared to Be Given to Volunteers.

recruits have received the pneumonia vaccination.

A polysaccharide, a form of sugar, contains the immunizing antgent, which term is defined by Dr. Felton as "that fraction, or chemical, of the cell which stimulates in experimental animals a response such that their defense against live virulent organisms is enhanced."

He experimented—and continues to do so—for years upon white mice before calling on human volunteers.

The vaccine, should it prove to be successful, would protect the individual only against types I and II of pneumonia, but these, combined, account for more than half of all cases.

Produced on a small scale, the compound is very costly but turned out in commercial quantities it could be administered for a nominal fee, it is believed. Pending conclusive and fool-proof testing of the formula, however, the vaccine probably will not be made available to private physicians.

tomorrow, but may put into Nagasaki if her wounded need immediate attention.

The Japanese reported seven of those wounded—two passengers and five members of the crew—were transferred to the British cruiser Cumberland, which had raced to the Hoover's assistance when her radio operator sent out messages for aid.

The Hoover was approaching her anchorage off Woosung, north of Shanghai proper, when she was attacked. She was coming from Manila, where she had discharged American refugees from this city.

Two American destroyers, the Edsall and the Parrott, raced to the Hoover's side when her frantic radios for help crackled through the air to United States naval headquarters here. They were escorting her to Japan today.

Attack Endangered 583.

The ship had intended to take on several hundred more refugees here, but Admiral Harry Yarnell, commanding the United States Asiatic squadron, ordered her to proceed immediately to Japan after the attack.

A total of 583 persons—263 passengers and the crew of 320 men—faced possible death in the bombings. There apparently was no panic among the crew. Messages praised the courage and resourcefulness of the liner's commander, Capt. George Yardley, a veteran of the Pacific run.

The attack occurred in broad daylight.

The news immediately was relayed to U. S. Consul General Clarence Gauss, who pointed out that the Hoover was at least 20 miles off the Chines coast, on the high seas, when attacked. That she was not in Chinese territorial waters made the incident more grave.

Meanwhile Japan, with an estimated 250,000 men now in China, appeared ready to risk everything in a series of smashing blows on four major fronts along a line of 1,000 miles in an effort to crush all major Chinese resistance within four months.

Thousands were killed or wounded in a terrific land, air and water attack around this city.

Soviet Aid Pledge Charged.

Major developments during the last 24 hours included:

1. A Japanese military spokesman charged formally the nonaggression agreement between China and Soviet Russia, announced Sunday in Nanking and Moscow, contains secret annexes providing for Soviet military assistance to China. Japan's hope was to smash China's army beyond hope before this assistance can become effective.

2. The Japanese appeared to be winning slowly on all the major fighting fronts. In the vital area northwest of Peiping along the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway they had cleared the area between the Nankow Pass and Kalgan and most of Chahar Province and were driving the Chinese divisions there into northern Shansi and eastern Suiyuan Provinces. Southwest of Peiping on the Peiping-Hankow line they claimed to have driven the Chinese back along a line about 35 miles from Peiping.

3. The Chinese central government prepared for an expected Japanese invasion of South China ports and sent trained Nanking divisions to Amoy, Foochow, and elsewhere to take over the defense of these ports from provincial troops.

Hundreds of Civilians Die.

4. Japanese airplanes bombed the Chinese Airdrome at Namchow and a score of villages west of Shanghai, killing hundreds of Chinese civilians. Total civilian casualties from air bombings in the Shanghai-Nanking area since August 12 were estimated at 5,000.

5. Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, new chief-of-staff in Nanking in nominal charge of defense of the capital, and Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, former "Christian general," flew to Chinese military headquarters here and conferred with Gen. Chang Chih-chung, who has been restored as chief commander in the immediate Shanghai area.

6. At Tsingtao the United States Consulate instructed 600 Americans to prepare to concentrate at the waterfront and board American warships at a moment's notice, as the Japanese opened their drive southward toward Shantung.

The fighting around Shanghai increased in intensity as dawn approached.

Chinese airplanes made a counter raid in retaliation for Japanese bombings at 2 a. m. and dropped bombs on the Japanese positions in the Yangtsepoo area of the International Settlement and around the Japanese flagship Idzumo.

Japanese, Chinese Police Raid Peiping Vice Den

Peiping, Aug. 30 (AP).—Chinese and Japanese police joined forces in this Japanese-controlled city today to raid its largest and most notorious gambling and narcotic den. They arrested 118 gamblers and drug addicts. It was thought the move might signal a general clean-up campaign by the Japanese to convert the city into a showplace to hold its valuable tourist trade.

Ambassador Attends Chinese Benefit Dinner

At the Chinese Women's Association benefit dinner in the Lotus Restaurant last night (left to right), Mrs. C. C. Hung, chairman; Mrs. T. Z. not prevent ships which wished to do so from entering Chinese waters. But ship-owners at present do not appear disposed to insist on their rights and risk damage to or destruction of their vessels.

At the present time, according to reports reaching here, the situation in Shanghai has quieted down and not more than 300 Americans are anxious to leave. These had planned to board the President Hoover and the President McKinley. If they still wish to go, they will be taken out, in all probability by American naval vessels.

Hull also revealed that American Ambassador to China Nelson T. Johnson had been instructed to protest the bombing to the Nanking government. What other action will be taken was not revealed. In view of Secretary Hull's announcement last Friday that notice had been served on both China and Japan that they would be held strictly accountable for any injury or damage to American lives or property, it was believed the Chinese would be presented a bill for the damages to the President Hoover.

Neither Secretary Hull nor any of the authorities here were inclined to become excited about the incident. Secretary Hull termed it deplorable, but added that it was not an unusual incident under the circumstances. None in the State Department believed the Chinese aviators knew the vessel was American. It was thought the Chinese mistook the liner for a Japanese troop transport, since several Japanese warcraft were in the neighborhood.

Chinese Ambassador to the United States Chingteng T. Wang will make a formal call on Secretary Hull this morning, presmably to express the regret of his government. A United Press cable from Nanking stated Wang had been instructed to convey to the State Department the sincere regrets of the Chinese government and the readiness of this government (the Chinese) to make immediate redress."

Wang issued a statement asserting he hastened "to express deep sympathy for those who have been injured," as a result of the bombing. He added that the Chinese people had a high regard for the efficient service of the Dollar Line, whose founder, Capt. Dollar, he added "has been recognized as a sincere friend of China."

Meanwhile Senator William E. Borah, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, expressed his sympathy for the Chinese but cautioned that the United states should take care not to become involved in any conflict. He praised Secretary Hull as pursuing such a policy.

"There is nothing to be gained by our assuming that war is not being waged in China. The fact that no formal declaration has been made has little to do with realities. There is war—an aggressive war of conquest.

"Of course, war being in progress, a great many things will happen calculated to arouse a feeling of resentment upon the part of our people. It is probable too that the American people very generally strongly sympathize with China. I know I do. Nevertheless, we should not permit ourselves to be drawn into any war or any controversy. And I think that is the clear policy of the Secretary of State.

"One thing seems quite certain, and that is, the cash and carry proposition is an impracticable provision of the so-called neutrality law. The cash and carry plan is a plan for countries with big navies. If it were put into effect at the present time it would be altogether favorable to Japan."

Britain Studies U.S. Aid Against China, Nippon

Bombing of American Ship Rouses Hope of Joint Diplomatic Action.

By the United Press.

London, Aug. 30.—Great Britain is studying the possibility of a joint Anglo-United States diplomatic action against the warring nations in the Far East, because of today's bombing of the United States liner President Hoover and the machine-gunning of Britain's Ambassador to China, it was reported tonight.

The British foreign office is interested deeply in Washington's official reaction to the attack on the President Hoover by Chinese war planes off the Shanghai coast.

No formal steps toward a British-American demarche to China and Japan will be taken until Britain receives a reply to her note of protest to Japan against the shooting of Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen.

Then, if circumstances warrant, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden may suggest a joint protest or warning to both the Chinese and Japanese governments, it was said.

The British note to Japan, delivered yesterday by J. L. Dodds, British charge d'affaires at Tokyo, to Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, will be followed by an early demand for a prompt, satisfactory reply, it was reported.

Britain, demanding the "fullest measure of redress," insisted on a formal apology, "suitable punishment" for those responsible for the attack on Sir Hughe and assurance by Japanese authorities that recurrence of "incidents of such character" will be prevented.

Japan Reserves All Resources For 3-Year War

By the United Press.

Tokyo, (Tuesday), Aug. 31.—Faced with increasing foreign complications as result of her undeclared war on China, Japan today decided to prepare for a struggle of three years or more and probably to cancel the 1940 Olympic Games, which were to have been held in this city.

The government faced five grave problems of immediate importance.

1. The possibility of armed intervention by Soviet Russia in the Chinese-Japanese conflict as a result of alleged "secret annexes" to the Chinese-Soviet nonaggression treaty announced in Nanking and Moscow.

United States Demand Pondered.

2. The demand of the British government for a formal apology because of the machine gunning of the British ambassador to China, Sir Knatchbull-Hugessen, by Japanese military aviators outside Shanghai.

3. An expected demand by the United States that Japanese warships avoid the proximity of American vessels in China waters so that their presence will not cause new attacks on American ships, such as that of yesterday on the American liner President Hoover, off Shanghai, by Chinese aviators, who were fighting with Japanese warcraft.

Blockade Holds Dangers.

4. The enforcement of the Japanese naval blockade of China's coast. The government realizes this blockade may lead to new complications with Britain and other maritime powers.

5. The question of the Olympic Games. It was understood Count Michimasa Soejims, who has worked for years to obtain the games for Tokyo, conferred with Prince Fumimaro Konoye, premier, yesterday and agreed Parliament should vote on the question, since the nation's entire efforts must be concentrated on the Chinese conflict. Parliament meets September 3.

Baptists Seek Japanese Pay For Properties

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 30.—The Rev. Charles E. Maddry, executive secretary of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, said today the board's 215 missionaries in China were safe, but its schools and other properties had been heavily damaged.

He said he and the Rev. J. W. Decker, executive secretary of the Northern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, planned to have the United States State Department present a claim to the Japanese government "for every dollar's worth of property" the Japanese have "wantonly and deliberately destroyed."

Most of the missionaries of the Southern board have been evacuated from the danger areas, Dr. Maddry said.

Bombs Destroy Schools.

Twenty missionaries were moved from the University of Shanghai on the Whangpoo River, which was owned and operated jointly by the Northern and Southern Missionary Boards. This property, valued at approximately $1,000,000, was bombed by the Japanese with heavy damage.

Dr. Maddry said the Ming Jong schools and 12 missionary homes at Chapei were destroyed by Jap bombers after the 20 missionaries stationed there were evacuated.

The two women missionaries at the Cantonese school in Shanghai were moved to safety. The property was believed destroyed.

Fate of Some Unknown.

The fate of the North Gate School in the French Concession of Shanghai was unknown. Three missionaries were there, including Elizabeth Hale, of Virginia.

News dispatches said the Soochow school, 50 miles up the Yangtze River from Shanghai, had been bombed. C. G. McDaniel, of Virginia, was principal of the school.

Dr. Maddry said the board's schools at Canton at last reports were untouched. The 59 missionaries in the schols there were removed.

Many smaller schools of the interior, also in the line of fighting, were unheard from, he said, as were five hospitals in the theater of war.

Tokyo Man Claims Japan Against War

Swarthmore, Pa., Aug. 30 (AP).—A Japanese delegate to the Second Friends' World Conference said today 90 per cent of the Japanese people are opposed to the present undeclared war between Japan and China.

"The present invasion of China by Japan is motivated by a militaristic clique which is trying to protect the Manchukuo experiment," said Seiju Hirawaka, of Tokyo.

"This experiment has thus far proved a colossal failure. Japan is spending much more money in Manchukuo than she is getting out of it."

Nippon's Metal Imports in 1937 Double 1936 Figure.

Japan's military machine is functioning with the aid of scrap iron from the United States, Government and business statistics indicated last night.

Shipments of iron and steel scrap and tin waste to Japan during the first half of 1937 totaled 1,318,803 gross tons, with 505,165 tons in the same period last year, and 1,057,359 tons for 1936.

Metal scrap is useful in the manufacture of armaments. An expert in New York said Japan is not buying any appreciable amount of scrap in the United States at present, perhaps because of her unfavorable trade balance.

This authority pointed out that Japan placed heavy orders in this country earlier in the year, and said none of the metal remained to be shipped.

From New Orleans came word that total loadings of scrap iron are about 50 per cent below the peak of three months ago. Japan is out of the market now, authorities said, and Great Britain is the chief customer at $18.50 a ton, a price $4 lower than the peak.

At Baltimore, figures on exports to Japan alone were not available, but the Association of Commerce said total iron and steel scrap exports from that port for the first six months of 1937 were 105,525 tons as compared with 104,870 tons for the entire year 1936.

Since June, said steamship officials at San Francisco, scrap shipments from the West Coast have been subsiding. They said Japan is well stocked.

Ten ships took 60,000 tons of scrap for Japan from Tampa since the first of the year; while Boston reported that it had shipped 43,786 gross tons, with Japan paying an average of $18 per ton. From Savannah, Ga., 16,410 tons went to Japan.

Cummings Fills Two Vacancies In Justice Unit

Miles Appointed Special Assistant; Quinn Gets Promotion.

Appointment of Vincent M. Miles, Social Security Board member whose term expired this month, as special assistant to the Attorney General was announced yesterday by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Miles' first duty in the Department of Justice will be to handle the Government's interests in a Supreme Court case involving Rio Grande River water rights, in which Texas and New Mexico are litigants, officials of the department said.

Together with announcement of the Miles appointment, Cummings disclosed that of Thomas D. Quinn, personnel officer and assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, has been named administrative assistant to the Attorney General.

Became Agent in 1927.

Quinn is a native of Portsmouth, N. H. He became an FBI agent in April, 1927, and an inspector March 14, 1934. Quinn is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School and a member of the District bar.

The vacancy to which Quinn was appointed resulted when Charles E. Stewart resigned to become clerk of the District Court of the District of Columbia.

Miles served two years as a member of the Social Security Board. His place on the board was filled by appointment of Mary Dewson, when his termed expired earlier this month.

Born in Virginia.

A native of Marion, Va., he attended both Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia, then began the practice of law at Fort Smith, Ark., in 1907. He married Evelyn Trezevant Williams, a Washington girl, in 1910.

Active politically, Miles is a former member of the Democratic National Committee. Prior to his Social Security Board service he had been with the Government briefly as regional adviser of the Public Works Administration. During the World War he was a captain of infantry.

Overeducation Called Threat To Democracy

President of Wesleyan U. Favors Schooling Curb; Krock Speaks.

By the Associated Press.

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 30.—An assertion that "a nation completely college trained" could be viewed as "a real threat to democracy" tonight came from President James L. McConaughy, of Wesleyan University.

The Middletown, Conn., college president told delegates to the Institute of Human Relations that "Democracy would be wise if it could curb the education of thousands of our present school population."

He declared that although men may be created equal, "from the date of birth they differ in capacity and promise." He added:

"For hundreds of thousands today a high school training is largely a waste of time, a waste of public funds. We are so education-minded as a Nation we refuse to see that education may be a waste and not an asset for some of us."

Dr. McConaughy addressed the institute, which opened yesterday on the campus of Williams College under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, shortly after two newspapermen had taken opposing sides on the effect upon democracy of a delayed expression of the will of the majority.

Arthur Krock, Washington correspondent for the New York Times, asserted "we shall not cross the threshold of true democracy until the electoral majority registers its will on the government it has selected, and at once."

He described as a disruptive influence the withholding of the wages and hours bill from the House by a minority of the House Labor Committee.

Henry Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star, contended, however, that such delays might have a unifying effect upon democracy "by preventing temporary majorities from running over minorities and by permitting the process of education to go forward."

Feeder Airline System Urged In Small Cities

Many Airports Unable to Pace Developments, Says Air Mail Chief.

Direct air-mail facilities for the medium-sized city cannot be provided by the Postoffice Department until Congress makes funds available for a "feeder" system of airways connecting trunk lines, Supt. Charles P. Graddick, of the Air Mail Service, said yesterday.

"It would be unwise," he said, "for the smaller cities to attempt to develop airports which would accommodate the great transcontinental planes. With a system of feeder airlines they would have the advantage of faster mail service, and would not have to bear the financial burden of building large terminals. We are expecting a small twin-motored plane to be developed within the next few years which will make possible passenger traffic to the smaller cities, and we expect that a feeder system will be in operation by that time."

The department receives much correspondence asking that some small city be made a stop, or declaring that small fields now used are unsafe. Almost daily Superintendent Graddick said, word is received that certain fields have been declared unsafe by the Bureau of Air Commerce, on complaint of the carriers, and the department has no choice but to discontinue service.

Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, said sometimes service is stopped only until repairs are made to airports. He pointed out, however, planes are developing too rapidly for many airports to keep pace.

"Here's what we're up against," he explained. "An airport is ready to use bigger and faster planes, but one airport is inadequate. Are we to deny more modern service to all other places on the line because one city's airport won't permit the stops?"

He indicated that the solution lay in standardization of planes for use at smaller fields and the development of short feeder lines.

Father Sues Union, Says Son's Suicide Was Due to Fear

Detroit, Aug. 30 (AP).—James Briggs filed suit for $85,000 against the United Automobile Workers of America today, charging fears of violence from union members drove his son, Robert, to suicide.

Robert Briggs, 22, was described by his father as an unwilling participant in a 10-day sit-down strike at the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corporation plant which ended January 6. The youth died of poison on April 22.

German Planes Arrive, Depart on Azores Hops

Port Washington, N. District Legalizes $1.75 Realty Tax

Just to make the $1.75 realty and tangible personal property tax rate legal, the District Commissioners yesterday issued a formal order fixing the rate at that figure.

Congress in the omnibus tax act said the realty rate shall "not be less than" $1.75.

The tax is retroactive to July 1, but the first semiannual payment may be made without penalty as late as October 31, instead of September 30, as heretofore.

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

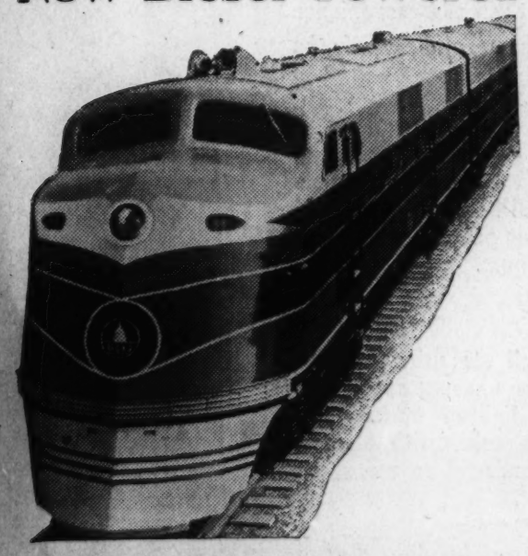

IT may seem unreasonable, but most men cannot understand why a woman who is usually happy and loving should have recurring periods when her whole character seems changed. He cannot appreciate the distress, the discomfort that all women must endure. He does not know what it is to do housework with an aching back and failing energy. All he does know is that other women seem more cheerful by comparison.

Are you such a three-quarter wife?

Don't let the ordeals that all women face cause you avoidable discomfort or endanger your home. Do as so many wise women have—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through." Adv.

Miller Sworn As D.C. Appeals Court Justice

100 See Former Member of U. S. Tax Board Take Oath.

Justin Miller yesterday took oath of office as a justice on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The ceremony was held in the Department of Justice, and Chief Justice George E. Martin and nearly 100 of Miller's friends looked on as Montcure Burke, clerk of the court, administered the oath.

The new justice, born 49 years ago in Crescent City, Calif., was nominated by President Roosevelt August 20 to succeed the late Associate Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, and was confirmed three days later.

He goes to the bench after serving as a member of the Federal Board of Tax Appeals. Before that he was an Assistant Attorney General. In that role, he directed the Attorney General's National Crime Conference late in 1935, a conclave that has been credited with changing American psychology with respect to crime. Since then, experts agree, crime has been stripped of its false glamor.

Justice Miller was once dean of the Law School of Duke University and of the Law School of the University of California. He was awarded two degrees by Stanford University and took advanced courses at the University of Montana and Yale University. He is a former president of the Federal Bar Association.

Chinese on Tramp To Run Blockade

Seattle, Aug. 30 (AP).—Manned by 27 Chinese and a Norwegian master, Capt. F. C. Norwick, the rusty tramp steamer Hai Da was outfitting here today to run the Japanese naval blockade with 5,000 tons of sulphur, ingredient of gunpowder. Special guards patrolled the pier.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Singleton Leads.

Among the quite unreasonable prejudices that still exist (heritages from bygone bridge days) is the prejudice against the lead of a singleton. The ancient conception was that singleton leads were almost invariably bad and that if the leader held four or five trumps, such leads were tantamount to suicide. The fact of the matter is a far cry from this absurd theory. It is difficult to generalize on any department of bridge and, most particularly, on the department of opening leads. But this much can truly be said: that if one is defending against a low contract, singleton, or even doubleton, leads may be the shrewdest possible, since it is highly desirable to use as many of one's small trumps as one can for ruffing purposes.

The following hand occurred in a recent duplicate in which no fewer than five nationally known experts played in the West position. Their unanimity in selecting a singleton as the opening lead was all the more remarkable in that their partners had opened the bidding with another suit.

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
Match point duplicate.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	1 ♠	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Several of the South players who had overcalled with one spade and been promptly doubled went into long "huddles," obviously toying with the idea of running to two clubs. In every case, however, the decision was to let bad enough alone. Also, in every case, the West players, despite the fact that they had a doubleton in a suit that partner had bid, chose the singleton club opening. The result proved the wisdom of this selection. East won, and on the sound theory that partner would not have opened the club without a good reason, led the suit back. West ruffed and led the top diamond. The Queen won and another club ruff followed. Another diamond produced another ruff. Now West laid down the heart King and when it held, followed this up with the heart Jack. West deliberately avoided playing the heart Queen because he wanted partner, who apparently held the Ace, to overtake. West counted correctly that declarer, who had shown four clubs and two diamonds, could hardly hold more than two hearts. Thus the best defense at this point demanded that East overtake the heart and, instead of playing a third round, lead a diamond. This would insure that West, who was down to the Queen-nine of spades blank, would make the Queen either on an overruff or through promotion if South were to ruff with the Ace or King. East read the message correctly and did as he was asked. Declarer was helpless to avoid a three-trick defeat.

Champion Stolen Car Retrievers

Policemen F. J. Behnke (at wheel) and M. F. Frye, assigned to the traffic division, whose record for recovering stolen cars nearly equals the entire traffic squad. Their year's mark is 322 against 498 for the whole division.

Two Eagle-Eyed Policemen Find 322 Stolen Cars in Year

Recovery Record of Frye and Behnke Nearly Equals Mark of Entire Traffic Squad; Spotting 'Hot' Auto Provides Thrill.

Woe to the auto thief who runs afoul of Policeman M. F. (Eagle Eye) Frye and F. J. (Hawk Eye) Behnke.

Assigned to a traffic division radio cruiser, they have recovered nearly as many stolen cars during the past year as all other members of the traffic squad.

During the past fiscal year Frye and Behnke have recovered and returned to owners 322 stolen autos. The traffic division accounted for a total of 498 recoveries.

Before them is a typewritten list of stolen-car tag numbers. The majority of stolen cars, said the policemen, are found parked on little-used side streets.

Most auto thieves, they find, are bent on joy-riding. A few steal to strip the cars of tires and ornaments. There are certain sections of the city, said Frye and Behnke, where "hot" cars are abandoned. These include alleys and streets in outlying sections.

Thus far this month the cruising traffic officers have recovered 24 purloined autos. In addition to their stolen-car activities, Frye and Behnke must investigate traffic accidents, enforce regulations and perform routine police duties.

"We get sort of dizzy constantly watching out for tag numbers," said Frye, who is in charge of the cruiser car, "but it still is a thrill to spot a number which corresponds to our stolen-car list."

Both officers have a system. They memorize the first three figures of all "wanted" tag numbers and then hastily check the remaining numerals against their list.

HoldingCompanies Called 'Justified'

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Jules S. Bache, international financier and head of the brokerage house of J. S. Bache & Co., declared today that as long as the Federal law permits personal holding companies "they are justified" as a means of tax avoidance.

Returning from a European visit, Bache said, when asked about the action of the Treasury Department in bringing his own Canadian holding company up for scrutiny before the United States Senate:

"As long as the law permits holding companies they are justified. When the law no longer permits them, they will not be justified."

Evans Building Sold at Auction

The Evans Building, nine-story brick and stone office structure at 1420 New York avenue northwest, was sold at auction yesterday for $410,000, to Benjamin S. Minor, lawyer representing the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., holder of the first trust. Minor was the sole bidder at the sale advertised by A. C. Houghton, Edgar M. Mayne and S. B. Maynard, substitute trustees. Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

The building containing four stores, barber shop and 150 offices, was erected in 1909, by John O. and A. W. Evans who with Eleanor Esterbrook and Marguerite C. Evans were original owners. Designed by Frederick B. Pyle, architect, it was one of the first buildings in the city to have a terra cotta front. Originally it had an arcade extending through to G street. Albert O. Hagar, who promoted erection of the Washington Building, adjoining the structure, planned at one time to have the Evans Building combined with the later structure.

Subsequent owners of the Evans Building were Henry Ravenel, Oliver H. P. Johnson, Albert O. Hagar and the National Metropolitan Bank, trustees, and Washington (D. C.) Investment Trust.

Rider Made Chief Permit Examiner

Lindsey T. Rider, 33, was appointed chief permit examiner of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic yesterday, succeeding Robert Cornett, who resigned recently.

Rider has been an employe of the traffic department for six years. He was elevated from assistant examiner. During service in the permit division Rider was instrumental in uncovering a "racket" whereby persons were fraudulently obtaining licenses.

His investigation resulted in several recent arrests. Persons who could neither read nor write were hiring "professionals" to take written examinations and pass driving tests. Rider is married and will assume his new duties immediately.

Tempered Idealism.

The steamer Wichita, China-bound from Baltimore with a cargo of American airplanes and barbed wire, may never get there. At least that is the threat made by Ralph Emerson, legislative respresentative for the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate. Mr. Emerson forecasts a sit-down strike by union seamen aboard the ship to prevent it from completing the voyage.

It is understandable that Mr. Emerson and the union in whose name he speaks are alarmed by the existence of an undeclared war in the Far East and would like to do what they can to prevent that holocaust from spreading further. A case could be made out, no doubt, for a strike designed to hold up any shipment of munitions to the belligerents. But if logical, Mr. Emerson and his fellows cannot stop at that point. They must insist, with equal force, on the complete suspension of all trade with China and Japan.

Insofar as this Nation does any business with those countries the effect is to make it easier for the belligerents to continue fighting. When the wives of trade union officials buy silk stockings the chances are that they are indirectly assisting the Japanese government's campaign of aggression. When there is a church collection for Chinese mission schools the contribution probably assists Chiang Kai-shek to concentrate his efforts on resisting Japan.

To see modern warfare in terms of munitions alone, and to think that a nation can liberate itself from entanglements by holding up an occasional shipment here or there, is childish reasoning. It may salve American consciences to have a middle-man intervene between us and the belligerents, so that at first glance there seems to be no direct implication for us. But such an ostrich attitude is fundamentally hypocritical.

Moreover, Mr. Emerson's solicitude for American peace turns out on examination to be limited by material considerations for the members of his union. As an alternative to a sit-down strike that would prevent the shipment of arms and munitions to Asia, he is said to have suggested a $250 bonus per trip for seamen on munitions-carrying ships in war zones.

This is idealism on the auction block and would come near to placing the peace-loving sailors in the same class with the profiteering "merchants of death" whose activities they properly hold in low esteem.

A Good Start.

Old ships, like old buildings, may be made safer and better, but they can never be brought up to the standards set for new construction. That generalization applies with especial force to the American merchant marine, which is fast approaching a 90 per cent degree of obsolescence.

The Maritime Commission has been given a wonderful opportunity, therefore, not only to replace obsolete tonnage through subsidized shipbuilding, but to make certain that the replacement units measure up to the standards of modern safety and convenience both for passengers and crews.

That the commission appreciates the importance of this aspect of its activities is apparent from the character of the requirements outlined in the regulations covering applications for assistance under the merchant marine act. New ships, for instance, must be built in conformity with safety standards laid down by a Senate committee following investigation of the Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters.

Besides being "fireproof and foolproof as far as modern safety standards can make them," vessels qualifying for subsidies must be built so as to serve the purpose of naval auxiliaries in case of need. A particularly important requirement is that quarters and accommodations for the crew must be satisfactory. The disorders that have caused such prolonged strikes and shipping tie-ups have been aggravated, if not entirely caused, by hardships due to inadequate and improper accommodation for ships' crews.

Besides taking every precaution against disasters due to faulty ship construction, the commission also has to safeguard itself against losses from construction of vessels that are not needed or not suited to the type of service to be rendered. Consequently, applicants for construction subsidies are also being asked to furnish information on such matters as well as data to show their financial standing and corporate connections.

The Sino-Russian Treaty.

There is no reason to assume that there is more to the Sino-Russian treaty of nonaggression than has been made public. Its significance, judged only from what it says and cleary implies, is quite enough.

Coming at a moment when China is summoning all her resources to fight off Japanese aggression, these implications are enormous. For Article 2 of the treaty is tantamount to a pledge that whatever the territorial gains Japan may make, none of them will be recognized by Russia or regarded by her, now or in the future, as having any validity.

The military strategy of her campaign shows that one of Japan's objectives in this undeclared war is to supplement the seizure of Manchuria, accomplished six years ago, by driving a wedge between China and Siberia extending as far west as Outer Mongolia. Any such conquests, Moscow now announces in effect, will be deemed to have no binding force whatsoever. To direct this notification to Tokyo through the medium of an admirable treaty of non-aggression between Moscow and Nanking is indeed subtle diplomacy. It is no wonder that the Japanese foreign office is hot and bothered.

Its officials have reason to be. They have to find a formula which will satisfy the stiff British protest over the attack upon her Ambassador to Nanking. They have to digest the intimation from our Government that we shall hold Japan responsible for all damages caused to American lives and interests by the invasion of Shanghai and other Chinese cities. On top of this comes Russia's pointed move, which, as the Moscow press is inspired to point out, "acquires particular importance in the present situation."

Almost the only compensation for Tokyo in the complications it faces is the reckless actions of such unskilled Chinese aviators as those who bombed the liner President Hoover off the mouth of the Yangtze yesterday. Such appalling blunders tend to give the Japanese a reasonable excuse in the case of the attack on the British envoy. But the Chinese government obviously seeks to offset this disadvantage by the promptness of its voluntary apology and offer of redress for the President Hoover incident. Moreover, it would seem possible that Japan, if she is found aggressor in this war, may have to assume ultimate responsibility for all the results of fighting, no matter by whom inflicted.

It is this question of the determination of aggression which makes China's contemplated protest to the Council of the League of Nations so important. There is little or no possibility that the League itself will be able to check the course on which Japan has embarked. But it has the machinery to determine, by judicial inquiry, whether or not Japan had any shred of justification for the brutal war she has launched. If such justification is not forthcoming it will be easy to decide to which capital the bill for damages should be sent.

The Russian government has acted wisely in aligning itself with those powers which seek to keep the Sino-Japanese conflict from spreading, but which are equally determined that the nation actually responsible for that conflict shall not gain from any violation of the Nine-Power or other treaties. Moscow has given Nanking an assurance of friendship, which means something at this critical hour.

And it has given this assurance in a way to which no nation, unless willing to regard itself as an actual or potential aggressor, can take exception.

Unacceptable Universes.

Margaret Fuller, in one of her tumultuous fusions of intellect and emotion is described as having flung wide her arms, exclaiming, "I accept the universe!" Her critics, more numerous and nastier than she deserved, jumped at the opportunity to suggest that Miss Fuller was being too gracious.

But in truth Miss Fuller was merely showing admirable sense to accept a universe that was at all acceptable. Accepting a universe is a pleasure no longer possible, with the mathematicians turning out new ones as rapidly and regularly as fashions are turned out by the designers of Hollywood and Paris. But such universes! Universes that contract or expand like waistlines; that blow up like bubbles, or burn out like candles.

Presumably, the universe accepted by Margaret Fuller was the one still in vogue in her day, made out of a not-too-complicated assortment of springs, wheels and ratchets called "laws of nature." Though less satisfactory in some ways than an earlier universe, which rested comfortably on the back of a turtle, Miss Fuller's universe had undeniable merits. It ticked with such consoling notions as "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." It was apparently self-winding. It could be inclosed handsomely and congruously in a case of revealed religion or deistic moral philosophy. Above all, it kept time.

Alas, it had to be noticed that the sponsor of this admirable universe had neglected to provide any adequate lubricant. The mathematicians hastened to provide and apply one, which they called either aether or ether. The effect was disastrous, and, when reproached with the disaster, the mathematicians could only reply, like the March Hare, "It was the best butter, you know."

Then the mathematicians put together a new universe. This one ignored what the Mad Hatter—who seems to have been a pretty profound kind of fellow, he had said, namely, that the one thing Time won't tolerate is to be beaten. The mathematicians now took with Time the attitude of the Duke of Wellington with his rank-and-file soldier. The thing to do with Time, they said, was to flog him regularly and truss him to a curved and warping gun limber.

A little sound discipline of this kind and Time will meekly permit you to say: "I am having so much pleasure to read last month the editorial you are going to write year after next."

If the mathematicians intend to make over the universe every few months, it is not unreasonable to ask them to produce something that looks a little more comfortable to live in than any of the universes which are currently advertised to let.

An Impossible Attitude.

A new high in Nazi effrontery was reached this week in the statements made by two responsible officials of the Third Reich.

At the Stuttgart rally of foreign-resident Germans, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the Reich's foreign minister, said that his government will not recognize the right of other governments to interfere with or prohibit the organization of German National Socialist units abroad. "We will not tolerate" he said, "that foreign governments should discriminate against Germans within their boundaries because of Nazi affiliations."

In other words the spread of Nazi doctrines by propagandists sent abroad from Berlin must not be interfered with, or the wrath of the Third Reich will descend on those officials and governments responsible for such measures of self-defense. Within each country, under the protection of the German government, officially recognized groups are to be permitted to function in the interests of the Nazi regime.

In this amazing speech Von Neurath was merely putting into different language a point of view already expounded some days earlier by Ernest Bohle, head of the Nazi Foreign Organization, the Comintern of the Nazi movement. In a statement given wide publicity in the German press he demanded diplomatic rights for Nazi party officials living abroad. Instructions have been sent to German diplomatic representatives, he revealed, not to accept invitations to official functions unless the chief of the local section of the National Socialist Party likewise is invited.

This attitude, if it is maintained, is certain to raise the question of whether diplomatic relations are possible between the Third Reich and any nation properly jealous of its sovereignty and independence. The same egregious type of interference which Nazi Germany would be the first to denounce, and rightly, were it made by Soviet Russia on behalf of Communist groups and leaders, it seemingly insists upon for its own sectarians.

The answer, in this country, to the monumental gall displayed by the Nazi regime in this instance should take the form of far more active surveillance of Nazi activities than has been the case in the past. Clearly there will have to be a less complacent attitude toward the goings and comings, the intrigue and espionage, of Nazi spies, organizers and adherents.

Seemingly, also, the time approaches to raise the question of whether the citizenship obtained by those whose loyalties and whose primary allegiance is still with the Third Reich was not obtained under false pretenses.

But The Wrong Pew.

It couldn't happen here, or anywhere, skeptics said recently upon hearing that Mr. E. N. Hudgins, a Washingtonian, had spent two years renovating the wrong farm. But it did! Not until the road was repaired, weeds cut, and moldy rooms cleared of debris did this potential farmer and his wife discover that they had been working on someone else's property. It was a denouement that no writer of short stories would permit for fear it would seem too far-fetched.

If Mr. Hudgins is feeling a little touchy on the subject, he may find consolation in the fact that his is not the story to end all stories of mistaken identity. There is a more recent one from Fairmont, Ill., that tops them all though, under the circumstances, that seems an unfortunate word. For in this case, it was the top of the wrong house which was removed. That is to say, the house was all right but it was the wrong roof. It all sounds very confused, but so was the contractor, who did the dismantling job and who only discovered his error when the house was open to the rain.

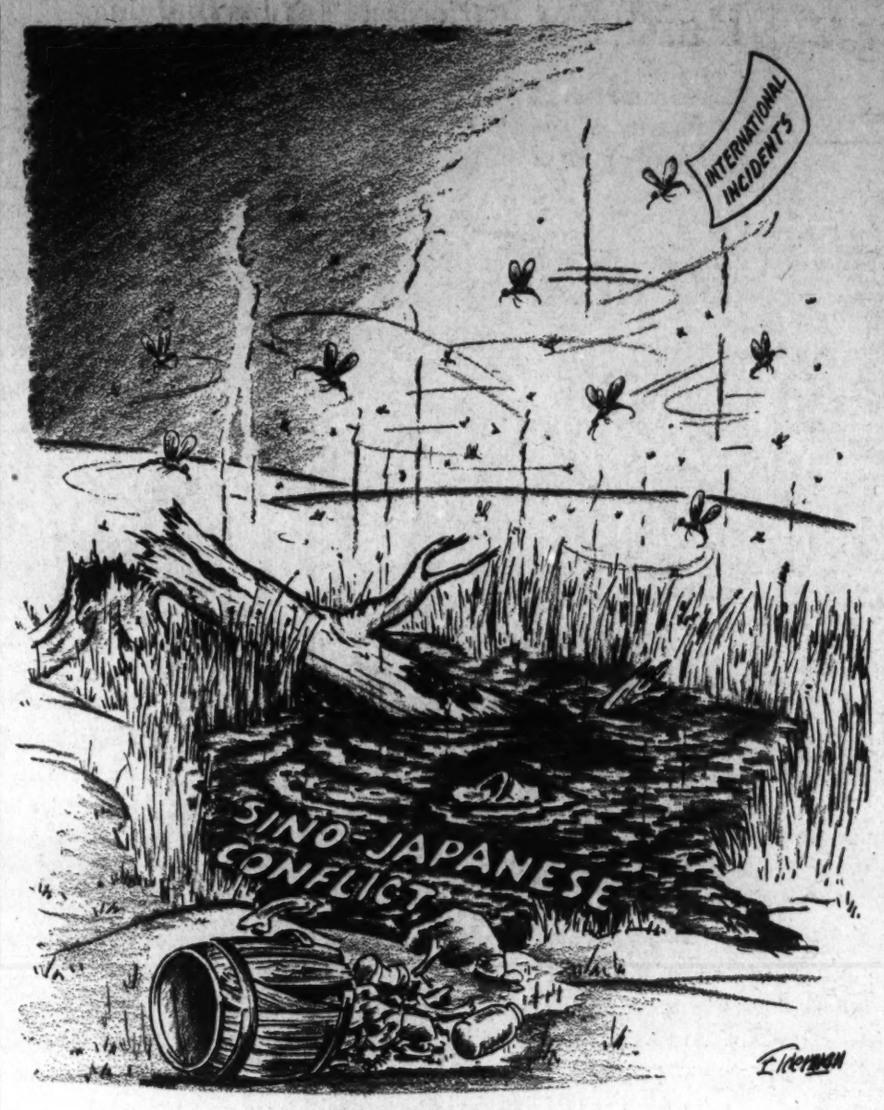

The home and garden magazines would do well to capitalize on these two new aspects of remodeling and dismantling. They seem fairly to shriek for articles on "How To Beautify Your Neighbor's Ground" and "The Fine Art of Reckless Wrecking."

Connecticut!

From the Manchester Herald.

Aside from influences of nativity and heredity, we prefer Connecticut for a bushel of reasons. One is that it is a sort of medium-done State—neither so raw as Nebraska nor so overcooked as Massachusetts, not so pious as Emporia nor so tough as Chicago, not so flat as Kansas nor so straight-up-and-down as New Hampshire, not so smarty as Ohio, not so stupid as North Carolina.

Another is that its people are molded in no one pattern—that there are so many kinds of them. This State isn't a Little Scandinavia like Minnesota, nor a Little Germany like so much of Pennsylvania, or a Little Ireland, like eastern Massachusetts—but a Little World; its people constitute a cross section of humanity. It is impossible to live in Connecticut and be wholly provincial, because living here you contact the four corners of the earth, though you may have traveled little or not at all.

British Relief System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In one of your editorials of August 25 you use the announcement of Senator Byrnes' projected trip to England, to study the British relief system, as an occasion for vilifying the WPA and for advocating the adoption of the British system. No doubt it is your privilege to regard the WPA as "wasteful" and "ineffective." No doubt it is also your privilege to say that the WPA "does not differentiate between the workless, the work shy and the unemployable."

But why link up this vilification with an investigation trip which has not even been begun, let alone its findings and reports completed? Why predict that Senator Byrnes "will doubtless return home fortified in his opposition to our extravagant work-relief organization" and "will be in a position to offer constructive suggestions for future guidance?" What value will the American public attach to Senator Byrnes' report if his conclusions can be so confidently predicted before the Senator even sets sail for England to learn whether they do things better over there?

Indeed, since economy is the burden of your editorial and since you are already convinced that the WPA is rotten, I am surprised that you did not request the Senator to cancel his trip and save the taxpayers the expense. As far as your opinions are concerned, it is obvious that the Senator's report—whatever recommendations it may carry—will in no way change them, and as far as your knowledge of the facts is concerned, the documents which the Senator will bring home can have no influence, when the same documents already available at the Library of Congress appear to have no influence.

If you had consulted the reports of the British Unemployment Assistance Board you would not have written that in Great Britain doles and work relief are "normally confined to those who can be certified as unemployable." That board is charged by the act of 1934 with providing assistance to employables, i. e., "able-bodied unemployed persons who normally are wage-earners," and whose insurance benefits have run out or are insufficient. There is no provision for general work relief, although a certain number of training centers is provided for younger men and encouragement is given to subsistence production schemes.

One final query: Britain happens to be a poorer country than the United States and its relief policy is thus to be regarded as an expression not of its progressiveness but of its poverty. If, then, we want to go to other countries for ideas to imitate, why not pick the progressive ideas, rather than the ideas that are the expression of poverty, for imitation? For example, the English courts do not possess the right to invalidate acts of Parliament. That's an idea to imitate.

BENJAMIN GINZBURG.
Washington, Aug. 25.

If we may say so without being accused of "vilification," Mr. Ginzburg himself goes far to indorse the editorial statement to which he takes rather violent exception. The Post said, correctly, that in Great Britain "doles and work relief are normally confined to those who can be certified as unemployable." Our correspondent cites the exceptional cases in which relief other than unemployment insurance is permitted for those "normally wage-earners." —Editor.

The "Mandate."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President is prone to speak of a mandate he has from the voters. It has become a sort of obsession with him.

He and everyone else knows the last election was bought and paid for with the taxpayer's money. This "mandate" is gone with the wind as soon as Federal funds give out. Should the country finally get on the high road to recovery again, it will be a case of Nature pulling the patient through—due to a vigorous constitution and the doctor (F. D. R.) getting or claiming credit for it.

L. G. HIGGINS.

Threatened Reprisals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The campaign is obviously under way to cast into the outer darkness all New Deal court nonconformists—lofty claims of no reprisal to the contrary—in retaliation for having backslid after riding in on the New Deal tidal wave; no matter what crew of reds, radicals, "queers" and nondescript chance grabbers it will have to back to effect the purge.

The present rulers, still drunk from their mandate, might take heed of their own future from the fate they have purposed to mete out to those who have indicated the novelty of independence against continued operation of the one-man Government.

Past mandates, much more conclusive than the one now used to justify any New Deal brainstorm or extravagance—when lack of 5 billions pre-election relief fund and noncultivation on the Northern Negro vote is considered—were no insulation against an inflexible fate.

A few more major fumbles like the court control plan, and the turn can come as rapidly in the present case. Those who fall for a new deal are the sort to rend what they have reverenced—when cut off from the receiving end. Millions, on their own after a turn at the public trough, will in the next election manifest their pre-'32 indifference to the fate of the New Deal.

Alabama Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I enclose a copy of a statement I recently delivered to "Alabama," the news magazine of the Deep South.

MABEL JONES WEST,
President, Alabama Women's Democratic Club.
Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 25.

When the events of the past few days have been written into the record, one of the most unforgettable chapters in Alabama's turbulent political life will have become history.

Alabama, first in many things, has now established another—the first Governor to take advantage of a vacancy in the United States Senate to keep the honor and money in the family by appointing his wife, since law and precedent forbade that he himself should receive the appointment.

For bad taste, poor sportsmanship and cheap politics, his action is without parallel in American history. In his shadow boxing with his conscience to square himself with his constituents the Governor is stripped of every attribute of statesmanship and stands revealed as the naked apostle of material personal greed and thirst for power.

The women of Alabama, who admire Mrs. Graves for her ability and charm, as well as her many womanly qualities, bow their heads in sorrow that her appointment came in such a manner, that her recognition by her husband is a disgrace and not an honor to her sex and her State.

Mr. Fulpan Gets A Bouquet.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is to tell you that the column you printed this year describing the activities of Mr. Cicero Fulpan is one of the cleverest pieces of writing ever printed in The Post.

If Cicero Fulpan could be done into a book, it would afford comfort, understanding and merriment to millions of our countrymen.

HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senator.
Washington, Aug. 27.

"Apologetic Good."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In these troublous times, my own thought has returned to post-war days. Remember (but who doesn't?) when idealism was rubbish and "normalcy" our national religion, with every-men-for-himself-and-the-devil-take-the-hindmost our national slogan and keeping up with the Joneses our highest ambition? It may be that today we have attained to that state of humility which is necessary if we, individually or collectively, are to be digged out of the pit we, and the whole world, have digged for ourselves—but if so, our actions scarcely show it.

Who that heard the short-wave broadcast by a London correspondent after the shooting of the British Ambassador could feel otherwise than sad at the frankly confessed impotence of mighty England, the world's great champion of democracy? Who, hearing the frank admission that present atrocities in China had their beginning in the rape of Manchuria and the impotence of the league during that crisis, could help feeling a sense of shame at the part American has played—a pious Pilate, standing aside while civilization itself, it would appear, goes down in ruins.

To a great many thinking people, the chaotic conditions in the world today are largely the result of salt which has lost its saltiness and to lights which have been, all too painstakingly, hidden under bushels. If it is axiomatic that really loving one's neighbor as one's self would dissolve most of the world's problems, it is quite as self-evident that such a remedy is not being attempted. If it is true that good conquers evil and love conquers hate, it is quite as obvious that good has been apologetic, timid, weak where it should have been strong, and love seems to have been left out of the picture.

Samuel Pepys Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The brief statement regarding the pronunciation of the name of Samuel Pepys copied from the Christian Science Monitor in The Post some days ago is a bit belated. That matter was pretty definitely settled nearly a dozen years ago.

In the American Historical Review for October, 1926, pages 61-64, Roger P. McCutcheon quoted a passage from the English Intelligencer of July 28, 1679, in which the famous diarist's name is spelled "Peeps." Rightly he says that this item "gives clear evidence for the pronunciation of Pepys's name."

In the New York Times of January 2, 1927, the present writer called attention to this article. It would seem that to many persons the pleasure of continuing the wrangle outweighs the obligation of accepting this decisive evidence.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is just a little note of appreciation for the enjoyment afforded me by your article today entitled "Family Reunion."

I have attended just such reunions myself, near my former home at Oneida, but with the passing years had almost forgotten they existed. Your writer recalled many pleasant, forgotten scenes to my mind. I thank you both.

West Potomac Course.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to "Amateur Golfer's" letter about the late lamented West Potomac Park golf course: He predicts that our planning authorities will never reopen this golf course.

It gave pleasure to too many hundreds of people; it was so easily accessible via the Lincoln Memorial buses, and the charges were low. The park authorities cannot afford to permit such a glaring contrast to the rest of our park "facilities," which seem to be planned entirely for the "over-privileged."

Apples Again.

MY friend Caroline Martha reproaches me for a grave injustice in some paragraphs I recently contributed to this column on the subject of "Apple Orchards." She says that I mentioned the Northern Spy only once, whereas some other varieties, namely, the Baldwin, the Spitzenberg, and the King, were eulogized out of all proportion to their relative merits. So there is nothing else to do but extend my pomological remarks.

I would not for the world slight the Northern Spy, but I must admit that I know not how adequately to give it its due verbally. With some things encomiums fall flat, and there is no use in trying to describe the Northern Spy—either you know it or you don't, like pie for breakfast or hasty pudding.

Gustatory delights seem seldom to be the subjects of verse, but I have found one reference to the Northern Spy in poetry. It is in Mark Van Doren's poem "A Winter Diary" where he mentions—

The Baldwins to be eaten, and the Spies;
But Greenings are for betty and for pies.

Perhaps the Northern Spy should be done in an exhaustive poetic panegyric, as Joel Barlow did hasty pudding, but if something briefer is wanted I offer:

O Northern Spy . . .
Thou art the Apple of my eye!

I have a letter from Mr. H. A. Whitbeck, of Fredericksburg, Va., who says: "I must take exception to your statement that 'Virginia is no place for a New York apple.'" He then goes on to tell of his experience in trying to raise some of the Northern varieties:

"I, too, was born and raised in New York, and down through the years has come the memory of the apples we had there. When, in 1924, I bought a place and set out some of the good Virginia varieties, I also put in a few of the old New York varieties, which I was assured would not grow here. I went to New York for the stock, and there were some I could not find in any of the nurseries; all said: 'Old varieties, not grown now.' I did, however, find several of the old ones and have had splendid success with practically all of them:

"Red Astrachans—not bearing heavily, but 4 bushels last year from two trees. The deep-yellow Fall Pipins—perfect fruit, nearly as large as tea plates. Baldwins—20 bushels last year of the finest I ever saw. Spitzenbergs—my best tree blew down just at picking time year before last, but it had nearly 5 bushels of fine big apples on it. Rhode Island Greenings—for the perfect apple pie. Northern Spies—not doing so well as the others.

"My Pound Sweet has turned out to be a yellow apple, not the fine, red, deliciously sweet apple I knew as a boy. Those Pound Sweets were always favorites with me, not only for their eating qualities but—during the fall days after school it was my duty to pack apples in chaff from the oat threshing. There was no cold storage then, and if we wanted apples for late winter and spring they must be packed carefully, not to touch each other. With small apples it was slow and tiresome, but those big Pound Sweets filled a barrel in almost no time.

It is good news to hear from Mr. J. J. T. Graham, of Glenn Dale, Md., that the Gillyflower, which is another old Northern variety of apple I mentioned and which he calls Sheepnose, is still being grown. "I have one of these trees," he says, "that is just coming into bearing. The scions were furnished me by a gentleman in New York State, and he said he had several trees and a neighbor had about a dozen. The tree on my place has probably a dozen fruits on it at this time."

Also there has come a letter from Mr. Raymond C. Behaut, of Alexandria, Va., who spent his boyhood on a Massachusetts farm, where the apple orchard was a favorite spot. He kindly invites me this coming winter to "drop over some evening when we have a dishful of your favorite varieties on the table."

I hope there will be some Northern Spies included, and if there are I will sneak one or two out for Caroline.

Visible House Numbers.

More and more Memphians are equipping their houses with numbers that are visible by day and by night, and so does the city strengthen its claim to being truly civilized. It is a sign that man can and will display humanity to man.

It is said that any definite, substantial need always inspires a way to meet it, and the need for house numbers so displayed that a fellow can tell where he is on a Memphis street at night without disturbing the peace of householders has inspired several satisfactory devices.

However the trick is accomplished, the fellow who fixes his house number so the passer-by can easily recognize it at night is a humanitarian and a public servant. Incidentally, he also saves himself the bother of having to go to the door several times a week to direct bewildered wayfarers. Like most other cases of social thinking, it confers benefits on the thinker as well as those thought of.

Your Nose Knows.

I HAVE BEEN READING some learned pieces on the art of drinking wine and find them rather discouraging because I don't want to become a career man at this sort of thing, and yet the subject apparently is one which takes a life study and conscientious drinking. And then, maybe it wouldn't be worth the bother because I read in such articles that there are only a very few acres of good vineyard in the entire world and that the expert drinker, after all his study and sampling, is constantly being disappointed.

The name of the wine tells him that it was grown on the third sprig from the left in the second row from the top in a side-hill patch in a dear little Old World village. But when the waiter has pulled the cork and poured him a shot of the wine his nose puckers up like a dried apple and warns him that this wine was grown in a swamp behind a house with blue shutters 25 miles in the other direction and isn't any good.

This not only ruins his evening but sets him to moping and sulking, and he isn't any use to himself or his loved ones for weeks and weeks.

• • • •

WHERE IGNORANCE permits one to assume, however, that anything in a bottle under a certain label is something very special in the way of wine it strikes me as foolishness to go to the trouble and cost of finding out that the stuff which speaks for $8 on the wine list is nothing but bathtub which the French dealers have sent over to the U. S. A. in reprisal for the dirty way the Americans have been acting about la dette.

This would cause resentment, and all the wine experts agree that wine must be approached in a spirit of generosity and loving kindness if the ideal effects are to be obtained.

A man should not wish to remain ignorant, but this subject of wine is such a big one that I don't think I have enough time left to go into it fully. If I happened to be taking my belts at a bottle of something which is very old and elegant, for all I know to the contrary, it wouldn't do my enjoyment any good to be told that it was nothing but red ink.

I conclude from my reading of the expert instruction that the ignoramus is likely to find much greater pleasure in his wine, though it be merely a French brand of sheep dip or hooch, than the expert finds in a much better grade of stuff which, nevertheless, to his fastidious nose and palate is a couple of eighths under perfection.

• • • •

MR. JULIAN STREET, a wine expert, declares that a really sophisticated taste can remember a wine, visualizing not only its name, but the scene where it was grown, the attractive daughter of the man who owned the place and the surroundings in which he first encountered it. This I can readily believe, for I have had a somewhat similar experience as to various kinds of stimulant which I encountered on my travels under prohibition.

During that time, I now begin to realize, I developed a nose and a taste for hooch as discriminating as his knowledge of wine. This took practice, perseverance, suffering and no little expenditure of money.

You may blindfold Mr. Street and certain other wine experts and give them little whiffs of many vintages and they will undertake, for a side bet, if you insist, to identify each sample with many particulars. But I think I could undertake to call the names of many varieties of strong beverages of the kind which were sold during prohibition and the State where I first encountered the same and under what circumstances.

• • • •

I COULD NOT FAIL on Louisiana corn, for example. The first sniff of that peculiar gasoline bouquet would tell me that this was the drink which I first met up with in a little cabin in the woods outside Shreveport, run by an old faro dealer who had retired from professional life to be near his old mother and whose fingers were too rheumatic to handle the cards any more, anyway.

Maryland rye would arouse a memory of Washington in 1926, and needled beer would carry me back to an upstairs place in Chicago where the sign said 'International Mercantile Foundation, Inc." I could spot at once the peculiar aroma, like the smell of sulphur, arising from the only rye available in Cleveland during the time the Republicans were nominating Mr. Coolidge and the prohibition agents were arresting citizens for carrying packages in the streets.

I never thought this knowledge was worth putting in a book. Because as the experts say with regard to wine, experience is the only teacher.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Those Old-Time Autos.

New York's commissioner of motor vehicles is looking for the oldest automobile in the State. And he doesn't mean the oldest-sounding one.

• • • •

He is finding many of these old-time horseless carriages. And in most cases there is somebody in front of it still trying to crank it.

• • • •

Just what the commissioner wants the oldest auto for is not very clear. Maybe it's just to prove that there was a time when cars were built so a man could get into one without bashing his noggin.

• • • •

We have a sentimental interest in those early puddle-jumpers. They had only one or two instruments on the dash, there were no ash trays in 'em and you couldn't control the headlights with your big toe, but they had personality. They gave you a battle all the way.

• • • •

There was po pressing of an electric button as the handmaiden of rapid transit. Even getting the thing in the mood to move was a man's job. If you planned getting an auto to obey you in those days you had to be willing to wrestle it, two out of three falls to count for the decision.

• • • •

It was futile to try to start one unless you'd had a good steak for breakfast. Then you went out to the barn and threw down your challenge.

• • • •

You took the bear robes off the hood, spat on your hands, rolled up your sleeves and began cranking. (This was just to warm you up, not the motor.)

• • • •

Then you lifted the hood and opened up the petcocks that used to be over each cylinder, for emergencies. Then you found a gasoline can and squirted a few gills of gas into each pet-cock.

• • • •

That was all you remembered until the wife hurried out and helped drag you out of the oats box with a broken arm.

• • • •

But were you discouraged? By one broken arm? Phooey! You put it in splints and started with the other arm.

• • • •

The wife would then venture the suggestion, "I think you'll have to have a kettle of hot water, Willis; it was purty cold last night." So she got a kettle of hot water and poured it over the manifold. This soothed the old bus a little and made it more docile, but it had character. It was no car to say "yes" to one kettle of hot water.

• • • •

It generally took three or four. Finally, with a roar like an artillery attack, the old motor got going and you and the wife kept running back and forth from the motor to the wheel raising and lowering various gadgets to get the commotion down to normal. Then you got in and went boom-booming out of the yard for better or worse. You didn't bother to have the arm set. You'd only break it again the next morning.

Raid On The C. I. O.

Massachusetts A. F. Of L. Suspends 49 Locals Affiliated With C. I. O. In First Tentative Try At A Militant Offensive.

By Joel Underwood.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Boston.

FOLLOWING orders from the Washington offices of the American Federation of Labor, the Massachusetts federation has committed itself to the task of raiding the C. I. O. in the State. This new departure in policy comes at a time when officials of the State federation believe that the major C. I. O. unions are floundering in their declared campaign to organize the unorganized. The drive of the United Shoe Workers of America seems to have spent itself temporarily, while the campaign among textile workers, after stirring up fire and smoke at the American Woolen Mills in Lawrence, has apparently deferred an active campaign in this sector until the silk industry in the Middle Atlantic States is taken care of.

The new militancy of the federation is an experiment in tactics, for hitherto active opposition to the C. I. O. unions has been largely confined to the individual efforts of the A. F. of L. internationals directly affected by C. I. O. expansion. The campaign by the Massachusetts Federation is expected to test the desirability of similar tactics in other States.

The first steps in the new departure were taken a few days before the annual convention in Lowell when the executive board suspended the C. I. O. unions affiliated to the federation. Forty-nine locals out of a State-wide total of 568 were dropped from the rolls, and, of course, deprived of representation at the convention. Eighteen of these locals were far in arrears in their per capita taxes, which is hardly astonishing in view of the action of the Tampa convention of the A. F. of L. last November.

Opposition to Split Registered From Boston.

OPPOSITION to the open split sponsored by President Gatelee in the Lowell convention developed in an unexpected quarter. Secretary Johnson of the Boston Building Trades Council announced himself as a candidate to oppose the re-election of Gatelee. Some support for his candidacy was expected to come from Boston delegates who have been piqued at what they consider to be a monopoly of the general offices of the State federation by communities outside of Boston. But mere resentment, while good enough to consolidate an opposition, was not considered to be a sufficiently appealing platform to woo general support.

In looking about for votes, Mr. Johnson ran across a small group of C. I. O. sympathizers who were interested in promoting a resolution opposing the policies of Mr. Gatelee. Thus it was that Mr. Johnson appeared as the champion of unity and conciliation in the convention, a cause, however, for which he had spoken on occasion before. Supporters of his nomination in the Typographical Union were candid in admitting in their seconding speeches that they would not have appeared in such a role if it had not been for the C. I. O. issue.

The resolution around which the Gatelee-Johnson fight and the unity issue centered called for a national convention to be attended by delegates from the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions, independent unions, and the railroad brotherhoods. Its purpose was to promote harmony and unity in the American labor movement, and a platform to this effect was to be drawn up and adopted by the convention. As a bona fide proposal, it demonstrated a rather fantastic simplicity of approach to an extremely complicated tangle of interests and personalities. As a propagandist resolution intended to bring into sharp relief the issue between militancy and conciliation, however, it served its purpose well enough.

After a four-hour debate, the resolution was defeated and the candidacy of Mr. Johnson lost, the first by a larger margin than the second. In demonstrating the complete intransigeance of their newfound militancy, the leaders of the convention also reported unfavorably on a resolution calling for a united Labor Day demonstration in which the Federation was to march with the C. I. O. unions. A demonstration was quite agreeable but not in the company proposed. The question of unity, then, was an issue before the convention on three separate occasions, but like the famous denials of the biblical Peter, the convention thrice repudiated unity.

Where to Find Recruits Is Problem of Federation.

WHAT THE final results of the new policy will be, it is difficult to predict. It is clear that certain problems are immediately raised, not the least of which is the question as to where the new members which the Federation hopes to organize are to be recruited. One supposition is that members will desert the C. I. O. unions, organize as Federal locals and ask for admittance to the Federation in direct affiliation.

The argument of the Federation leaders is that the rank and file of such C. I. O. unions as the United Textile Workers are resentful of the way they were driven into the C. I. O. without being consulted. These workers are expected to desert their own organizations for the leading-string sort of tutelage which the Federation exercises over its Federal unions. They are expected to surrender the possible advantages which may result from the drive of the T. W. O. C. for the doubtful benefits of affiliation with the Federation which has neither the means nor the inclination for a drive in textiles.

Not Massachusetts but the Southern States are the key piece in the textile situation. If the drive of the T. W. O. C. fails in the South, there might be serious defections to the Federation camp in Massachusetts. Until then, the ranks are more likely than not to remain steadfast.

In the shoe industry the situation is a bit different. The Boot and Shoe Workers Union is still affiliated to the Federation. Any members who left the United Shoe Workers would eventually be taken again into the B. S. W. U. But it was rebellion against the officialdom of this organization which gave rise to the development of the very independent unions which amalgamated as the U. S. W. A. Indeed, there are still independents like the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen which, while not allying with the C. I. O. group, very definitely do not want B. S. W. U. control again.

It is particularly hopeless to expect to make any inroads in the clothing unions or the rubber workers, for they are among the best organized in Massachusetts. Indeed, it is difficult to see where the militant campaign of the Federation is going to win any substantial number of C. I. O. workers. The Federation might try its hand at organizing textile mills in Lawrence, where the T. W. O. C. has not made any appreciable gains as yet. The Federation has already twice tried to build organization among the Lawrence workers but without conspicuous success.

C. I. O. Regional Offices Probably Will Absorb Ousted.

IN THE MEANTIME, the New England regional offices of the C. I. O. will probably take care of the suspended unions. It is an interesting aspect of this set-up that it is coterminous with the boundaries of the New England States. In this respect, it follows the lines of an area which, for many governmental purposes, is a Federal region. The Federation, of course, is limted to the confines of the State. If the C. I. O. ever develops permanent national institutions, it may develop a trade union regionalism like that of the Federal Government instead of administrative regions to fit State boundaries.

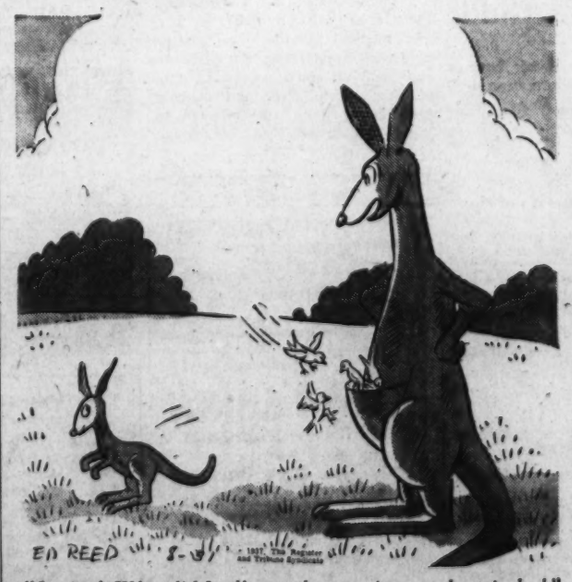

As it is, the C. I. O. has two official bodies in New England, one an advisory and the other an administrative unit. The advisory unit is called the New England Council and has Thomas Burns, of the Rubber Workers, as president, and Powers Hapgood as secretary. Each organization in the C. I. O. has a member on the board of the council. Then there is a New England regional office of the C. I. O. with Michael Widman as director. The C. I. O. unions are affiliated to this body and pay assessments to it but are otherwise autonomous. This office is a clearing house for C. I. O. business and is responsible directly to the national organization of the C. I. O.

There already exists in New England then the skeletal framework for the government of C. I. O. affairs if the suspensions made by the State Federation are changed to expulsion. Local officials of both the State Federation and the C. I. O. expect this action to be taken by the Denver convention of the A. F. of L.

In view of the serious difficulties involved, the net result of the Federation's new policy of militancy can only be an increased bitterness in the two factions of the labor movement. The wedge was driven long ago when the Federation elected to follow craft unionism and to neglect the interests of the mass-production workers. As a matter of tactics, a raid like that planned in Massachusetts is sound only if the chances of its success are great. It is merely futile trouble-making when the chances are as slim as they seem to be.

Numbing Fears

By Barnet Nover

The Degradation Of Human Values.

"THE ONLY THING we have to fear," said President Franklin D. Roosevelt in his first inaugural, "is fear itself, nameless, unreasonable, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance."

The Chief Executive was referring to the wave of intense pessimism then sweeping the United States—pessimism concerning our political institutions, our economic future, the state of the Nation generally. But these words have a pertinence today as great as they had on March 4, 1933. Only this time they describe the perils that confront us as a result of our panicky state of mind concerning America's external relations rather than its domestic situation.

• • • •

THERE CAN BE no doubt that the American people today are desperately eager for peace. This generation has been educated to the grisly realities of war. The glamour has been stripped from it; war's glory has become a mockery to people with the slightest awareness of what is going on in the world.

There can be no quarrel with this state of mind. Indeed it is a heartening fact that here as in so many other parts of the world peace-mindedness is so prevalent. Under other circumstances it might, indeed, be the subject of profound congratulation.

Unfortunately, the love of peace is by no means universal. There are nations in the world today who, despite solemn treaties, agreements, protocols and pacts, are prepared to go to war to achieve what the handful of men who rule their destinies consider to be national advantages.

This is a fact as undeniable as the fact that wars are horrible. But the former fact is ignored in democratic lands because the latter has so completely taken possession of the minds of men. Thus the warmongers are in a position to act without fear of reprisals, certain that the peace-loving nations are wedded to a neutrality which is the product of stark fear.

• • • •

IT IS A GHASTLY bit of irony. Had the world generally been less peaceful than it is the plains of Manchuria, the mountain passes of Ethiopia, the streets of Madrid and the crowded quarters of Shanghai would not, in turn, have been made into battlefields.

The successive blows at the fabric of world peace have resulted not merely because certain nations are warmongers but because the rest of the world clings desperately to a peace that cannot exist in a world where the aggressors go unpunished and where fear of war has become a self-defeating emotion.

• • • •

THIS FEAR of war has had some terrifying results. It has not only permitted certain nations to get away, literally, with murder; it has also produced a collapse in human values.

We see the evidence at every hand. Two days ago the refugee crowded area of Nantao, in Shanghai, was bombarded by Japanese planes. It was an act without the slightest military justification. It was barbarism run riot. There were no protests. And certain of our professional pacifists used the occasion to renew their clamors for the application of our stupid and dangerous neutrality law. Let the devil take the hindmost, say these blind leaders of the blind.

But this moral astigmatism is on a par with the attitude these gentry have maintained for some time. Nothing is capable of shocking them out of their flight from reality. Fear of war has numbed their reason and chloroformed their emotions. But in taking this stand they are dealing a blow to everything which in the past has given dignity and nobility to human life.

• • • •

TO THOSE WHO say that the world cannot, except to its own terrible hurt, stand by without protesting in the strongest possible language at such atrocities as the Japanese are now perpetrating in China, the professional pacifists reply that such protests are dangerous. We have nothing to do with the war in China. Like the apes of Nikko our motto must be: See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil.

What those who argue thus do not see is that the destruction of international law, of decent international life, of humanitarian concepts so painfully built up over a course of many centuries means the brutalization of life everywhere.

Because war is terrible, as everybody admits it is; because we must do nothing to get involved in its bloody grasp, we must also close our eyes to realities. Let us abide a while, as the poet has it, and see injustice done. We must make no distinction between aggressor and victim, between right and might. Thus the so-called leaders of the so-called peace movement.

• • • •

THE ATROCITIES now being perpetrated in the Shanghai area are but the lineal and logical successors to the rape of Guernica, the bombardment of Madrid, the massacre at Addis Ababa and the destruction of Chapei in 1932.

By any standards they put to shame the atrocities of the past against which an outraged world cried out in wrath. But there is no Gladstone among the statesmen of the civilized world to denounce the janissaries of our times. To do so would be undiplomatic; it might irritate the war-conquering States and their dictators; above all it might increase the panic at home by suggesting that moral considerations have a role to play in the lives of nations as of individuals.

We have grown callous to outrages. They have followed each other in such stupefying succession that even horror has become customary. But the real reason for our ghastly indifference to the destruction of human life and human values is that we are afraid. There is still enough of idealism in our make-up that we dare not face the truth and let our mouths utter what or hearts feel. For if we do we could not stand by helplessly and hopelessly and see civilization dragged into the dust.

We are paying a heavy price for our fears. But that is nothing in comparison with the price we may have to pay. For in refusing to see that the only way we can avoid war and the consequences of war is to take constructive action for peace together with all the other nations prepared to join us, we are playing up a terrible legacy for ourselves and our children.

You can temporarily appease a lion cub by giving him bits of meat. But such appetites grow with the eating. In permitting ourselves to become the victims of panic we are, in the words of Mr. Roosevelt, paralyzing "needed efforts to convert retreat into advance."

Americans in France

By William Lyon Phelps

Large Numbers.

Nearly 12,000 Americans are now living in France. According to the latest news from my friend, Bernhard Ragner, who is one of them, there are at present exactly 11,881 citizens of the United States who are permanent residents of France; which is an increase of about 700 over the year 1936.

The largest number, as might be expected, are in or close to Paris—there are 8,254. There are 168 Federal Government employes and officers, with 200 dependents. And of the Americans living in Paris (leaving out Federal employes) there are 3,311 men and 4,575 women and children.

• • • •

Listed according to their occupations, students come first. There are about 2,000 students; of professional self-supporters, there are 36 lawyers, about 25 newspapermen, and 34 doctors and dentists. American dentists lead the world. I had an admirable Greek dentist in Athens, but he was a graduate of that department in the University of Pennsylvania. There are seven clergymen.

The City of Nice follows Paris in the number of American residents. There are 1,352. This city has a good round-the-year climate and Milan, Venice, Florence, and even Rome are within easy distance. One of America's fine classical scholars, J. Robinson Smith, is a resident of Nice.

• • • •

Bordeaux has 512 Americans; and the port of Cherbourg only three! Perhaps these three could not find their passports, and decided to stay there. I shall never forget my agony when I temporarily lost mine in that region.

There are about 1,500 Americans living in France who are A. E. F. veterans; they married French girls.

The Americans in Paris support four churches, two student clubs, two high schools, one daily newspaper, one American club, one hospital, an American library, and two legion posts.

Chinese Name Japan Attacker Before League

Nippon 'Is Committed to Conquest,' Note to Geneva Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 30.—China charged tonight that Japan precipitated the present Far Eastern conflict and warned that the "world as yet has witnessed only the beginning" of hostilities.

The Chinese note was sent to the League of Nations advisory committee on China and a copy went to the United States, which is a member of the committee.

China accused Japan of rejecting all Chinese attempts to settle local conflicts by direct negotiation, mediation of arbitration, and declared "Japan irrevocably is committed to a policy of military conquest and expansion in the Asiatic continent."

"Simple Aggression."

"Japanese armed forces invaded China's territory extensively," the Chinese note to the league charged, "attacking Chinese positions on land, at sea and in the air, in central as well as in North China.

"Thus, the case of aggression is pure and simple; China is exercising her natural right of self defense; the failure of all other means of repelling violence having compelled her to resort to force, which is contrary to China's wish; Japan's present action in China is a continuation of the aggressive program started in Manchuria in September, 1931.

"Japan now has occupied the Peiping-Tientsin area and is bent upon extension and occupation of the whole of North China, and the domination of other regions in spite of all her assurances of no territorial designs in this country. She is attempting to destroy all the work of reconstruction of the Chinese nation, so steadily and assiduously undertaken in the last ten years.

Violations Claimed.

"Thus, by deliberately disturbing peace in the Far East, Japan has violated the fundamental principles of the Covenant of the League of Nations, using war as an instrument of national policy and ignoring all pacific means of settlement of international controversies, violated the Paris peace pact of 1927; acting contrary to a pledge to respect sovereignty, independence and territorial administrative integrity of China, she has violated the nine-power treaty concluded in Washington in 1922."

League officials said a session of the advisory committee may be convoked at Geneva to consider the protest.

Another Torpedo Runs Wild, Sinks Boat Off Newport

Newport, R. I., Aug. 30 (AP).—An unloaded naval torpedo ripped "crazily" through the harbor off this exclusive society resort today for the second time in 18 days—this time sinking a small fishing boat.

Fired in target practice, the torpedo veered from its course after being dropped from a plane and smashed through the sides of the boat, the impact hurling Manuel Bonas, owner of the craft, into the water.

A navy craft patroling the practice range rescued Bonas and two sailors from the boat. A torpedo, shot from the submarine Cacholot, plowed through the harbor 18 days ago, narrowly missing several big yachts here for the America's Cup races.

D. C. presidents in Virginia, West Virginia, South Carolina and Tennessee, Mrs. C. W. Daugette, Alabama president, said today. In a circular letter said the song was "untrue to the South. It is a product of an inflamed mind written during the excitement of war."

"Neighbor" Phillips, as she was affectionately known, entered the service in November, 1917, and became renowned for her accuracy and punctuality . . . An official citiation referred to her record as "an enviable one."

Veteran.

One of our operatives writes: "Devotion to duty, loyalty and tenacity of purpose are in evidence throughout every department of the Federal Government. The latest example is related by Joseph E. Cooper, superintendent of mails, upon his return from the thirty-fourth annual convention of the National Rural Carriers Association in New Orleans. There he met the rural carriers with the longest service record in the department.

E. E. Bouterie, retired carrier of Thibodeaux, La., entered the service in 1896 and was retired under the economy act of 1934. There is no telling how many thousands of letters or parcels he delivered or collected, nor how many miles he traveled in hot sun or drenching rains so that the mails might go through. He served under nine postmasters, 13 postmasters-general and each of the Presidents since Cleveland.

Connecticut Bars Barry From Ring

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 29—State Boxing Commissioner Joe Lawler tonight announced that he had barred Donald (Red) Barry, Washington heavyweight, from all Connecticut rings. The banishment is for an indefinite period. Lawlor's dictum follows the fiasco of August 21 when Barry was ordered from the ring at Walnut Beach Stadium by Referee Billy Smith in the first round of a bout with Al Gainer, New Haven heavy. Referee Smith said that Barry was not trying. Commissioner Lawlor, who immediately after the fight ordered the purses of both fighters held up, tonight directed that both Gainer and Barry receive their purses.

Crew Flees Flames On Munitions Ship

Marseille, France, Aug. 30 (AP).—Police guarded the beached and smoldering freighter Gyuri today after discovering she contained 525 tons of munitions.

The 643-ton vessel, flying the Panamanian flag, was abandoned by her crew this morning, when they were unable to extinguish a fire smoldering two days while she lay anchored.

Explosions, which accompanied the start of the fire as the ship was loading for Barcelona, Spanish government port, made police suspicious. The ship's papers said the munitions were loaded in Greece.

Rail Mediator Continues Effort to End Deadlock

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Dr. William M. Leiserson, of Washington, chairman of the National Railroad Mediation Board, continued today his efforts to dissolve a deadlock on wages between the Nation's major carriers and the five operating brotherhoods.

He conferred with chiefs of the brotherhoods—engineers, firemen, trainmen, conductors and switchmen—who have joined in a demand for a 20 per cent pay increase, and said he would meet the carriers' conference committee later.

Dr. Leiserson said he expected the negotiations would continue several days.

Dancing Will Feature Program at Theater

The Community Center yesterday announced that the Alice Louise Hunter dance concert will be held tonight at the Sylvan Theater near the Washington Monument. In the event of rain, it will be postponed from day to day until clear weather.

Daytona Beach, Fla., Aug. 30 (AP).—A small tropical storm dissipated itself in rain squalls over northeast Florida and southeast Georgia tonight after crossing the Atlantic coastline north of here this morning.

No one was hurt. No serious property damage was done. Heavy seas pounded the shoreline, but the Coast Guard received no calls for assistance.

The disturbance passed close to St. Augustine. The highest wind velocity reported was 50 miles an hour.

By the Associated Press.

Reservoir construction for flood control faced further delay yesterday as the result of War Department instructions that local interests must give the Federal Government unconditional title to reservoir property wherever potential power values exist.

A department spokesman said this interpretation of the 1936 flood control act had come "from a very high authority."

Maj. Seversky to Seek New Continental Mark

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Maj. Alexander de Seversky said tonight he and an associate, Felix W. Roscoe Turner.

Villages Prefer Horse Operas To Clark Gable

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—Tex Ritter—the big-time movie star you never saw and probably never will—rode home today, singing a cowboy song, after two months of communion with his fans.

Fans is right, too.

Once a week, regularly as clockwork, Tex makes a Western movie at Grand National Studios. These films, with lots of shooting and Indians and galloping horses, play the movie houses in thousands of small towns, where Tex is a greater favorite than Clark Gable, better known than Robert Taylor, and has for rivals on the screen only such shootin'-hootin'-tootin' he-men as Gene Autry, Buck Jones and Hoot Gibson.

The tall, lanky Tex, who used to lecture to women's clubs on the folklore of the old Southwest and who still writes all his own cowboy songs, left in June on a personal-appearance tour in such towns as Hominy, Okla.; Mahonoy City, Pa.; Pokomoke, Md.; War, W. Va.; Pikesville, Ky., and Baxter Springs, Kans.

He played songs for the folks, told them tall tales of Hollywood, signed their autograph books and listened to advice on how they wanted their movies.

No More Kissing.

"I made one picture this year in which I kissed the girl at the final flicker," Tex said upon his return. "Well, sir, the kids in these little towns know all my movies by heart and they wanted to know what I meant, ruining that picture with love stuff.

"I told 'em I never would kiss another girl in any of my pictures. I won't either. My fans know what they want.

"Then in a second film I got beat up a couple of times by the villain before virtue triumphed. In almost every town I stopped, some lad would say, 'Aw Tex, how come you let yourself get whipped?' I had to think fast. I told 'em that I must have had an off day, but that I was feeling a lot better and that I'd guarantee 'em nobody'd ever lick me on the screen again. Nobody will, either. If my fans don't want me to be whipped—I won't be."

Modern Westerns, known in the trade as "horse operas," all have singing stars, or at least a cowboy who can strum a guitar.

"And once I sang a song about love to the girl in the picture," Tex said. "That was a mistake. My fans said they didn't mind me singing to the girls all I wanted, but they didn't want me singing this sweetheart stuff. Hereafter when I sing to a girl it will be about get along little dogies and wagon wheels and stuff like that."

The making of Westerns, he continued, is like nothing else in Hollywood. The Ritter company usually goes to Kernville, Calif., in the mounatins, where there are plenty of horses to ride and room in which to slay Indians.

"And then we make these pictures, just like clockwork," Tex said. "Everybody knows his job and does it. The schedule calls for one week of shooting and we make a picture in seven days or else. None of this eight-week business for us, and none of this thing of shooting one scene a dozen times to get it right.

"Why once I was riding hell-bent across the prairie to rescue the little golden-haired girl, when I lost my stirrup in front of the camera.

"I told the director that I guessed he'd have to shoot it over. He said, 'Oh, that's all right, Tex,' and then he yelled:

"Next shot! Let's get goin', boys."

"So when the picture came out, there was me, the hero, galloping across the field, with one foot out of the stirrup. Did my fans care? No, sir. They cheered. They figured I was doing it on purpose!"

Lochinvar to Ride Again in New Film

Paramount has purchased "Vacation From Love" as a new starring vehicle for Fred MacMurray. This star, according to the studio schedule, will work first in "True Confession" with Carole Lombard, which Wesley Ruggles will direct. This will be followed by the epic of the air, "Men With Wings," in technicolor, which William Wellman is scheduled to direct.

Harlan Ware and Patterson McNutt, who authored "Vacation From Love, will write the screen play. The story is a fast-moving romantic farce, with MacMurray playing the role of a kidnaper of a bride-to-be from the altar.

Big Three.

Three essentials of a college story, romance, humor and suspense, are served in new setting with an unusual story flavor in "Saturday's Heroes," RKO Radio's screen drama of the gridiron.

About The Showshops

It Will Now Be Safe to Untrunk That Old Script; Tamar Lane Has Written a Book to Help Sell It!

One of Hollywood's Practical Screen Writers Sets Down Modern Requirements for Successful Marketing of Film Material; 'Zola' Makes the Cinema an Art; Many Players Do Double Service.

THE days when the grocery clerk, the stenographer, the traveling salesman or the telephone linesman could take his lunch hour to dash off a "scenario" for a motion picture on a potato sack, the back of an envelope, the lid of his trunk or the spur of the moment are, it seems, gone forever.

BELL.

No longer do the studios acquire severe cases of writer's cramp signing $10 and $15 checks for "working scripts" of priceless screen epics designed to go thundering down the ages at the rate of about one or two reels each. There was a time within the memory of those still living when that could be done. But not any more.

Writing for the cinema, now that it has been so thoroughly overtaken by sound, dialogue, tempo, nuance, mood and all of the other elements that enter into a perfected form of dramaturgy, has become one of the most complex fields of endeavor the creative scrivener can approach. A new and baffling technique has grown out of the enormous industry that has abandoned the nickelodeons for occupancy of the world's largest and most magnificent temples of amusement—a technique which heretofore has eluded the tyro who, in the old silent days of 11 years and more ago, was able occasionally to land a script in front of the cameras.

All that will be changed, at least in part, now for those who wish to secure a copy of Tamar Lane's new book, just off the presses of Whittlesey House and the McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc. Mr. Lane very accurately entitles his 342 meaty pages, "The New Technique of Screen Writing; A Practical Guide to the Writing and Marketing of Photoplays." A copy of it awaited me upon my return from the safari in quest of the ferocious man-eating mosquito that has its habitat in the wild, water-hole country ferninst the Lincoln Memorial and abaft the Washington Monument. I have examined the hefty tome with sufficient diligence to be aware that it deals intelligently and in helpful detail with the preparation and sale of suitable material for motion picture use.

There is nothing theoretical or fanciful about Mr. Lane's book. It is a straightforward exposition of problems that have plagued the writing craft, not already ensconced on Hollywood's back lots, for a good many years. It is written by a man on the ground, who is editor, scenarist and executive, associated with several prominent West Coast studios. It goes painstakingly into descriptions of the new forms, story construction, dialogue, story treatment, tempo and rhythm, camera angles and effects, how stories are handled, copyright and protection and a myriad other pat topics. Furthermore, there are valuable portions of the work devoted to the approach to the original story, adaptation and treatment and continuity.

Then it goes on into the practical matters of where and how to market, remuneration and other considerations of prime interest and importance to the new writer for the films. It guarantees nothing to the individual writer, of course, but it does smooth out many of the rough spots over which a majority of amateur scenarists have stumbled at one time or another.

There is always the possibility, needless to say, that even the most ardent aspirant may not have it in him to write a successful motion picture play. If he has it in him, however, and is being deterred only by unfamiliarity with the technical requirements involved, Mr. Lane's book should prove a genuine boon.

I might even take a whirl at it myself, now that this "first aid" has come into my possession.

* * * *

It seems a trifle late to bring up the matter of "The Life of Emile Zola," especially since it was done such ample justice by the pinch-hitting and patient Mr. Gross, but it seems to me that no one who views this tremendously moving picture can fail to perceive in it one of the cinema's major triumphs. If it possessed no other merit than the performance of the title role by Paul Muni, it still would stand as one of the mileposts marking the development of the screen to new heights of artistic achievement. "Zola," like "The Good Earth," transcends the mere recital of human woes as centered in a small group of people. It soars far beyond that into the rarified sphere of universal drama, based upon the fundamentals of life and man's relationship to his fellows, within or without the necessarily restricted limits of his own personal associations. Not to see this picture is to ignore one of the screen's supreme claims to the right to be known as an art instead of merely an industry.

Vacation-Day Discoveries.

For some reason, I feel at home only on the audience left-hand side of a theater. When seated on the right side, I feel like one who has been asked to watch the stage or screen standing on his head. Probably because I am right-handed and accustomed to being left in all important matters. The new seats in the National Theater are the most comfortable in town. The new-tinted side walls and drapes of the revered old National make it seem more intimate and infinitely more cozy. That improved ventilating system helps, too. And over it all Manager Edmund Plohn presides with his customary geniality, wearing approximately the expression of the cat that just swallowed the canary and was glad of it. It will probably not be later than October 1 when this desk will emit a low growl and leap on a flock of ladies' headgear with destructive intent, unless the dear things learn to remove their towering, slanting, topsy-turvy and utterly cockeyed bonnets when obstructing the views of everybody seated behind them. I don't know what the penalty is for hat-smashing, but it will be worth the rap. On the same day, I doubtlessly will demolish the theater patron who attends a performance armed with a mess of chewy caramels inclosed in a paper bag that rattles like a tin roof in a hurricane. As a matter of fact, I don't know what has occasioned the delay.

Dots and Dashes.

Several of the screen's better actors are doing double duty locally this week . . . Donald Crisp and Robert Barrat both are importantly cast in "Confession," with Kay Francis, at the Earle, and "Zola," at the National . . . Crisp is the presiding judge in the former and demoted to defense attorney in the latter . . . Barrat slips even farther . . . He is a prosecuting attorney in "Confession" and Dreyfus' treacherous Nemesis, Esterhazy in the Muni film . . . There are some old-timers in them both, too . . . Stuart Holmes, for one, unprogrammed and unsung, although it was not so long ago that he was one of the films' most popular villains . . . In "Confession," Tom Wilson is among the court spectators, bad eye, cauliflower ears and all . . . Tom used to specialize in blackface parts after he got through with the prize ring . . . One of his chores in the fisticuffing racket was to help condition—if any—Jim Jeffries for his fatal bout with Jack Johnson . . . Long time no see . . . That was Johnny Perkins—the whole ton of him—sprinting down to the Raleigh at eleven-something Sunday night . . . Was after the missus to sit in on a special midnight screening of "Lost Horizon" at the Earle, of all places . . . Johnny is mastering ceremonies at the Capitol with his usual aplomb—whatever that is . . . Maybe the Warner people hadn't heard! . . . And speaking of those long absent, Robert Warwick and Louis Calhern come to life in fine fashion in "Zola" . . . The wondering Mr. McIntyre will be glad to know this . . . The Yates sisters—Jerry, Carol and Lynn—are coming back to the Shoreham Terrace for another return engagement . . . I can show you their letter from Boston to prove it . . . But I probably won't . . . Speaking of Academy Award winners—as everybody is in connection with Paul Muni—it should not be forgotten that H. B. Warner received one also for the best supporting performance of the year as the oracle of Shangri-La in "Lost Horizon," coming to the Earle on Friday, with Ronald Colman starred . . . Did you know there was a local Shangri-Blah? . . . Ask me where.

Alkali-and-Cactus Note.

Leopold Stokowski Likes Novel Music

Leopold Stokowski, noted leader of the famed Philadelphia Symphony orchestra last week was a very interested auditor to a type of music which he never before had heard.

The noted maestro listened to Dave Apollon's orchestra, as it recorded selections for Universal's "Marry-Go-Round of 1938," and then expressed great interest at the formation of the orchestra. The group is composed of mandolins, guitars and string bass. Stokowski, who became especially interested in the music of the steel guitar, complimented Apollon and his musicians at the close of the renditions.

"Exquisite," he said. "The music seems to float!"

Tuna Merry Lyre to Mr. Millard!

All work and no fishing ordinarily makes a location trip to Catalina Island a very dull joy, indeed, for Hollywood film folk. So when Paramount ordered the "Ebb Tide" company there for scenes for this new Technicolor production, Ray Milland, one of the principals in the cast, took his tackle along and tackled the strenuous business of landing this 59-pound tuna—which he obviously did. It was the film colony's record catch for the season.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—In my mail this morning I found a letter from a Chicago University co-ed. In crisp, well-worded sentences, she told me that she is not pretty, that she has no flair for acting and that she neither sings nor dances. "But when I graduate next spring," she explained, "I have to find a job. It must have a future—and I want to do creative work. What chance is there for a young woman in business?"

FRED MacMURRAY, the motion picture

I am glad she asked that question for I think a lot of un-beautiful, but ambitious, girls are entertaining the same thought. The fact is that no other industry offers such rich opportunities to women. The other day a 34-year-old ex-secretary was appointed production assistant to Pandro Berman, the ace producer at RKO. Her salary, at a rough guess, will be $50,000 a year. Dorothy Arzner started as a script girl (earning three times as much as the average young business woman), became a cutter, then a scenarist and is now one of the best-paid directors in Hollywood. M-G-M's great research department is headed by a woman.

One of Hollywood's best known photographers was a woman. Ida Koverman, assistant to Louis B. Mayer, is a recognized power in the industry. Every studio publicity department has its bevy of well-paid girls, most of whom will probably move up the ladder to executive positions. Seventy-five per cent of the industry's big shot scenarists are women, for Hollywood, quite frankly, makes pictures primarily for feminine audiences and wants the feminine touch in everything it does.

An intelligent girl, once established in any capacity on a studio pay roll, need have no envy of the Garbos and the Crawfords of Hollywood.

After stretching it almost to the breaking point, Fred MacMurray has justified my faith in the influence of Highland blood. Several months ago, he started building a new home and, with true Caledonian thrift, scorned the frills and furbelows that distinguish most movie star's mansions. But as the weeks wore on, the MacMurray purse strings loosened alarmingly. A wing was added to the house, additional land was purchased and expensive landscaping was ordered. When finally a magnificent tile swimming pool was added to the plans, I decided that the Scotch had lost the battle. But today MacMurray told me that he has designed a system whereby the water in the pool will be drained out through underground pipes and used to irrigate the shrubbery. The MacMurray name is tarnished but not disgraced.

In a town where the invention of a new tap routine far outweighs the discovery of a new serum, where a smart-cracking comedian is more admired than a great educator, where a work of "art" is judged by the price it will bring, it is refreshing to discover someone who still retains a sane sense of values. I lunched with Claudette Colbert and—as usual—she was stopped at the cafe entrance by a phalanx of autograph hunters. "How does it feel?" I asked, when she finally broke away.

"Gratifying," she said, "but not as much so as it used to be. The other night I followed Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Nobel prize winner and distinguished scientist, into a cafe. Not one of the fans asked for his autograph, they all asked for mine. And I've felt like an inmate in an asylum ever since!"

In the mountains about 30 miles from Hollywood is a ranch which grows the most unusual crop on record. The owner, a hard-bitten Kansas farmer, tried to make cattle pay and failed. He put the land in wheat and would have starved without the bounty of Uncle Sam. And then came the grand idea—he visited a studio, rushed back to his land and planted a bumper crop of movie sets. He now has a complete Western "street"—saloons, dance halls, general stores, hitching racks—and Hollywood "comes to his door" two or three times a week to pay him a profit that must make his neighbors green with envy. To date this year, his rentals on the "street" have amounted to nearly twice the price of his land and its improvements.

Glass No Longer Taboo in Studios

The wide use of glass is made possible by recent improvements in motion picture photographic film, says Joe Valentine, cinematographer, who has just completed work on "100 Men and a Girl" and is starting on "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," at Universal studios.

"Glass crystal—in fact all objects with highly polished surfaces—used to be taboo with cameramen," he says. "Now we use them in almost every setting.

"Recently a new raw stock, which obviates the danger of 'hilation' has come into general use, and art directors are employing glass and crystal in ever-increasing amounts in beautifying motion picture settings."

For "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," the art director specified a glass table top measuring 5 feet by 10 feet, 1½ inches thick. The piece of plate glass weighs 985 pounds and cost $530.00. It will be seen in sequences showing the home occupied by Alice Brady in the screenplay.

Movie Anniversary.

Maureen O'Sullivan celebrated her eighth year in pictures as the comedienne in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "My Dear Miss Aldrich." She came to Hollywood when in her teens.

Jeanette Is Now A Tourists' Guide

Jeanette MacDonald has become a bureau of tourist information since her honeymoon in Hawaii with Gene Raymond.

Following "The Firefly" star's return, she has been besieged with queries concerning the islands, by other film folk planning vacations there.

Her first customer is Charles Igor Gorin, singing barber of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Broadway Melody of 1938." He leaves September 4 for Honolulu, his first vacation since he came to Hollywood.

Miss MacDonald has given him the names of friends on whom to call and a list of places of interest, he should visit.

New York, Aug. 30.

Columbia is screening "Paris on Broadway," a musical by Oscar Hammerstein, in which the basic idea is similar to the one used by the French Casino here. Jack Cohen, the Columbia official, therefore, went to the French Casino and asked the executives to permit him to photograph the interior of that theater-restaurant for the purpose of reproducing it as a movie set . . . The French Casino refused to grant permission. "But you're being silly about this," Cohen protested. "The Cotton Club, the Stork and many others—they never objected. In fact, they considered it good publicity." His protestations—three days' protestations—were in vain. The disappointed Cohen started to leave the Casino, heard a program-vendor peddling her wares, paid 25 cents for a copy of a program, and found there—complete in every detail—a two-page photo of the Casino's interior!

Next week, at the swanky Newport Casino in Rhode Island, Philip Gordon will have the principal dancing lead in the presentation of "The Dramatist." Gordon, who thus finds himself elevated to the midst of the bluest of bluebloods, got this job as a result of his recent appearance in "Candide," the dance-drama produced by WPA! . . . Marjorie Roye, who last appeared at the Oriental, has been signed for a 21-week engagement at the Irving Place . . . Joe Frisco insists that things are picking up with him okay now. He's got a better position behind the eight ball.

Teddy Hart, who won an Academy Award for his supporting performance in "3 Men on a Horse," is still frightened by Hollywood. Hart was brought to Hollywood by Mervyn LeRoy and screen-tested. The next morning, when he arrived for work, he discovered a young man who resembled him, and who was listening to the director say: "You get yourself a brown suit like Teddy Hart's, a derby like Hart years," etc. . . . "My God," mused the crestfallen Teddy, "they got this guy to play my role" . . . A half-hour later he discovered that the newcomer was his stand-in.

Rusty Thacher, whose father presides at the Thacher School in Santa Barbara, is confessing to this story: Rusty, who owns a plane, was flying from New Haven to Newark Airport at midnight. As he neared the city, he noticed the lights of another plane directly ahead of him—and so decided that the shortest way to his goal was to follow that plane . . . Follow it he did, until—nearing home—the other plane suddenly went upward, while Thacher continued on his way. At Newark Airport, he saw the pilot of that other plane—Col. Lindbergh—and identified himself. "One thing I want to know," he asked. "Why did you suddenly shoot upward?" . . . "Didn't you follow me up?" Lindbergh returned. Rusty shook his head, "Then, mister," he was told, "you flew right under the George Washington Bridge."

Last Sunday the News published a two-page color photo of Joe Louis and Tommy Farr. The Britisher was extremely pleased at this flattening publicity, and purchased one thousand copies of this picture section . . . He received a bill for $20.80, and became very much disturbed over this expense deduction from his guaranteed purse of $60,000 . . . "The bloomin' blarsted idiots," he raged at the Sunday News. "And I was goin' to make them—in England!"

RKO Signs Mitzi Green for Picture

Mitzi Green, current Broadway stage star appearing in "Babes in Arms," will return to Hollywood and films to star in a musical comedy for RKO Radio, it was announced by S. J. Briskin, vice president in charge of production.

"Fiddlesticks," a musical comedy especially purchased by RKO Radio for Miss Green, will be the star's first vehicle. Pandro S. Berman and Lee Jason will produce the film. The musical comedy was written by Frank Gabrielson, David Lesan and Milton Lazarus. Starting date of "Fiddlesticks" depends upon how soon Miss Green can manage to leave her current New York stage success.

Biggest Set Ever For "Wells Fargo"

Producer-Director Frank Lloyd, who is now filming "Wells Fargo," this week began shooting on the largest set ever built by the Paramount Studio.

The huge set, which is a replica of San Francisco's Portsmouth Square, as it appeared in 1850, includes 32 buildings. The studio reports it had to grade and level seven acres of land in order to accommodate the structures erected on this camera site.

"Wells Fargo," a saga of the West dealing particularly with development of communication between East and West, has a cast headed by Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns, Lloyd Nolan and Porter Hall.

Doubles in Haberdashery.

Lines and Materials, Lengths, Colors Vary

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE FALL COAT silhouette seems to be divided into two distinct classifications—the dressmaker type and the spectator sports. These versions are subdivided into numerous interpretations, style trends and fashion influences. The dressmaker coat is synonymous with fitted lines, various methods of introducing shoulder detail and sleeve treatment and unique ways of handling the fur or other trimming. In the realm of the more casual coats, there are long and short, loose and semi-fitted, swagger and straight lines, fur-trimmed and those which are styled without benefit of contrast. Belts appear on many of the fitted coats, but they may be worn or not, according to preference.

Coat lengths and materials are as varied as styling. Lengths ranging from the short affairs reminiscent of last summer's popular jigger coat, seven-eighth and three-quarter lengths, and the long coat which completely covers the dress are noted throughout the fall collections. The new coat fabrics were never so lovely—soft, nubby woolens and those which are delightfully smooth in texture; solid colors and mixtures consisting of two or half a dozen color tones. There is also a decided trend dressmaker fashion with novel deep yoke treatments, or in the classic and generally becoming reefer style.

Velvet to Trim Coats.

An old-fashioned idea in a new-fashioned manner is the use of velvet as a coat trimming. Combined with dull and smooth woolen fabrics, it gives an air of elegance, so popular in the entire fall and winter wardrobe. Persian lamb perhaps is used more than any other fur to trim coats of both tailored and dressmaker stylings. Long-haired furs, such as fox, lynx and wolf, are much in evidence on the travel-type of topcoat; silver and black fox adorn coats of the fitted and dressy versions, giving a luxurious appearance to otherwise simple coats. Hudson seal, beaver and fox are used for full-length tuxedo fronts, on nubby woolens and tweeds, in the casual coat classification.

Coat collars are small this year. Tiny, upstanding collars and those a bit larger which lie flat on the shoulders are in line with the trend toward a slim silhouette. The exception to this is the voluminous collar of long-haired fur. Some of the dressmaker types are made without collars—Ascot scarfs being added for needed warmth and to introduce a bit of dramatic color contrast. Sleeves are either the slim, fitted versions emulating dress sleeves, or loose and flowing—sometimes the loose sleeve is finished at the wrist with a tight cuff. The coat which buttons straight down the front is one of the season's most talked-about stylings. Newer than this is the one-sided fastening—an influence from the late fall Paris collections. Double-breasted tailored coats are still in the blue book of fashion. They are finished with small collars and revers.

Black Leads Dark Tones.

Black has taken precedence over other dark color tones for fall and winter. This is true in both the dressmaker type and tweedy mixtures which fashion the sports versions. In the casual and tailored coats, there are many attractive new colors; subdued tones of bright colors, such as reds, purples, soft browns, greens and blues. The multicolored mixtures were never so fascinating. Such delightful combinations as black, green, red, yellow and blue, in new looking tweeds, adapt themselves beautifully to the latest stylings. Coats of this type are grand as accessory backgrounds, lending themselves well to various and diverse color accents.

Costume coats, lined in the same material and color as the dress, are popular this fall. For instance, a dress of Navy and red checked sheer wool, with coat in three-fourth or seven-eighths length, lined in the checked material; tweed mixtures lined in solid colors matching the shade of the one or two-piece dress. A very practical garment is the two-piece suit with matching topcoat which may be worn with dress—this is one of the most popular fashion vagaries of the season. Tailored and dressy styles are available in this interpretation, both untrimmed and adorned with lavish additions of short or long-haired fur. It is a grand idea for either the school girl or business woman, being almost an entire wardrobe in one costmue.

Front-belted coats with loose, swinging backs are new.

Shoulders are molded, blocked or subtly folded.

Many Troubles May Keep Child From Joint Play

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

TOMMY read too much. He would not play with other children, but sat with his nose in a book. His mother finally forbade him to read, took the books away from him and sent him out to play. But Tommy only wandered about disconsolately, unwilling or unable to join in the games and sports of the other children in the neighborhood.

It may be that Tommy was near-sighted or had some defect in vision which made it hard for him to compete on equal terms with his fellows. Or he may have been partially deaf, which would, of course, be a handicap.

Maybe He Lisps.

Perhaps he stuttered or lisped and was afraid of the teasing which he knew would be his lot. There are a score of possibilities which may have made the child shy and unwilling to mix with others.

The child who will not play with his kind, but prefers to read or sit at home, should first of all have an all-around and thorough physical examination. If any defect in vision, speech or hearing is found, it should be remedied if possible. If cure or correction is out of the question, he should be given any known training or treatment to help him compensate for the handicap.

Must Be Encouraged.

If he is one of those children who tend toward the vicarious life and prefer the activities in books to real experiences, then merely taking away the books will not do any good. He must be given some incentive to mix with others and take part in their enterprises.

Sometimes a little success will encourage him, or a momentary feeling of superiority which a new baseball bat, a bicycle or boxing gloves might give. To draw the hermit out of his shell requires tact, understanding, and a great deal of ingenuity and patience. The means, however, must be positive and constructive. A negative means is no good at all.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What to Do? Asks Boy Whose Erstwhile Sweetheart Will Neither See Him Nor Talk to Him.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 16 years of age. I have just been going with a girl the same age. We went together steadily for about two months. I learned to like her a great deal and she told me she cared for me. Last week I asked her to go dancing with me. She sent down word by her mother that she was too tired to go out. However, at that very moment she was getting dressed to go out with my brother. She had gone with him up until two weeks before I started going with her.

* * * *

A couple of mornings later I had a talk with her and told her I was not willing to play second fiddle to anybody else, and that we were through so far as her being my girl was concerned; but that I still wanted to be friends with her. Since then I have been over to her house five times and she won't even speak to me. She treated my brother the same way when they broke up. She also made the remark to her own brother that she doesn't see why I come over to see her now. When we were going together she was very glad to have me come over to her house.

* * * *

I would like your advice on what to do. Should I continue going to her house and try to be friends? I hope I have given you enough details so that you can advise me correctly. Sincerely yours E. S.

* * * *

The Thing to Do.

DEAR E. S.: If my impression of this girl is correct, she doesn't want boy friends, in the true meaning of the word. She wants conquests. She is a silly little coquette, playing a cat-and-mouse game with whomever is greenhorn enough to fall for it. I cannot deny that it was her privilege to go dancing with your brother, rather than you, if she preferred; but she should have been straightforward enough to have told you she was going with him, instead of telling a falsehood that couldn't possibly fool anybody. And if she had made an engagement with you, she was a poor sport for breaking it.

* * * *

If you wish to make an impression on her that she won't soon forget, my advice to you is to drop her like the well-known hot potato. Send her word that you have changed your mind; that you don't even want to be friends with her, for the simple reason that she doesn't know the meaning of the word and couldn't be a true friend if she tried. If you stay away from her home altogether, I predict she won't be long in coming to her senses and that eventually she will be trying to get in touch with you, either directly or in roundabout fashion.

* * * *

Get yourself another girl, the most attractive, the squarest-shooting girl you know. Pay her marked attention and don't ever mention this girl's name to anybody. Let it be supposed that the though of her never crosses your mind. It is my belief that she thinks she has discovered a sure-fire method of getting the boys crazy about her, namely: By being sugar and spice and everything nice for a certain period of time, and then freezing up without a word of explanation. She needs to be taught a lesson for her own good. You can do it if you will. M. H.

Forgotten Two Listed Among Famed Women

TWO FAMOUS "forgotten ladies," Emma Lazarus, internationally minded poet-essayist and composer of the sonnet on the Statue of Liberty, and Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, daughter of the author of "The Scarlet Letter," who sacrificed her life caring for incurable cancer patients, were recently listed among 1,000 famous women by Miss Florence S. Hellman, acting chief bibliographer at the Library of Congress.

Among those mentioned are Annie Oakley, "sharpshooter;" Betty Howland Green, financier; Annie Smith Peck, mountain climber, and Margaret Bourke-White, photographer.

Seven women spies are listed. Among them are Lydia Barrington Darragh and Fanny Bullock Workmen, both "real daughters" of the Revolution; Belle Boyd, of the South, and Pauline Cushman, of the North.

Some of the names are unfamiliar. Who would recognize Molly Pitcher of early days as Mary Hays McCauley, or Helen Louise Leonard as the glamorous Lillian Russell?

The list of famous women has been compiled with especial attention to contemporaries. To meet the popular interest, there have been listed Grace Abbott, Evangeline Booth, Pearl Buck, Senator Hattie Carraway, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Helen Hayes, Grace Moore and many others of current popularity.

An attempt at classification is made, but the author says it is not a complete analysis of the careers of women. Actresses, club women, editors, Government officials, lecturers, missionaries, novelists, nurses, philanthropists, poets, social service workers and wives of famous men are listed "merely as an aid to locate material relating to the various professions."

Paris Winter Styles Use Furs in New Ways

Paris (AP).—Dressmakers' collections now shaping up for a chic cold season find striking new ways to use furs.

Wide panels of flat pelts run lengthwise on wool coats, almost covering the materials. This bands of fox in triple tiers trim coat fronts on the bias. Astrakhan weaves new patterns to decorate suits. Sundry coats and jackets without fur have their fronts shaped to show fur gilets to the best advantage. Many have toques and muffs which add other detached fur notes.

Gloves and Hose Ensemble.

Ensembling gloves and hose is a new note in chic styles, but with Rosalind Russell as its sponsor it is due to travel far.

The motion picture actress is especially partial to this idea for wear with street and sports clothes and the result is most effective. Shades of luggage tan in hose and matching gloves is particularly smart for late summer and early fall.

Vegetable turnovers are a very good way to serve vegetables at any season of the year, but right now vegetables seem especially good fixed up a little fancifully. It is an ideal way to use various left-over vegetables, because they can be mixed together and served in the turnovers.

If you can recall the Banbury tarts you used to take on picnics you will be able to visualize the vegetable turnovers because the vegetables are folded inside the baking-powder biscuit dough in the same way that the filling was folded inside of rich pastry in the Banbury tarts.

In case there are no vegetables left over to use, the simplest way to start is with a can of mixed vegetables. Make tender baking-powder biscuit dough, roll it out quite thin and cut it into rounds or squares. On each piece place about ½ to 1-3 cup of vegetables, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add half a teaspoon of butter. Wet the edges of the crust, fold over and press tightly together. Pierce the top with a fork to allow the steam to escape. Arrange on a baking sheet and bake about 15 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees). The tops can be brushed with milk to give a glaze and a deeper brown.

Serve these turnovers with some kind of sauce, such as cheese tomato sauce, a cream cheese sauce, a Spanish sauce or a meat gravy. Or combine the vegetables with some Vienna sausage or deviled ham. Salmon, tuna fish and minced clams are fish that taste good combined with vegetables and baked in turnovers.

The appearance of the turnover on the plate is attractive and the crusty crunch of the biscuit is a pleasing contrast to the vegetables and meat inside. Serve a mixed green salad with this, to which are added some canned grapefruit and pineapple.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Smallpox Vaccinations.

Last summer I went into St. George's Hospital, London, to see a cow's hide. There it was, the entire skin of a brindle cow, even including the legs, stretched out at full length, in a frame on the wall of the pathological laboratory.

That animal had once belonged to Edward Jenner of Gloucestershire, and from it, about 150 years ago, he took the first cow lymph which he used to perform vaccination.

Well, it's a long story that stems from that hide. When the bovine, whose facade it was, peacefully cropped the verdure of the Gloucestershire meadows, smallpox ran through the countryside like an ever-present flame. Little children went blind from it, and the blind asylums counted half their inmates as victims of smallpox.

Then the rumor grew that dairymaids who contracted a pustular eruption on their hands from the eruption on the teats of cows—the cow pox, a mild disease in humans—could not catch smallpox even if exposed. Edward Jenner was the first person who systematically tested this idea out. In 1798 he had accumulated enough data to be able to recommend the method to the world.

The world was so terrified of smallpox that it accepted the method with enthusiasm. There was some little dissent—it did seem a queer thing that you could prevent one disease by giving a person another—but with smallpox all around you and no pleasant disease, either, striking down your neighbors and your friends, you took a chance.

Far more willing then when smallpox was so common than now when you must be persuaded by faith on the basis of your intellect.

"Future nations," Thomas Jefferson wrote to Jenner, in 1806, "will know by history only that the loathsome smallpox has existed and by you has been extirpated."

The arguments from history are convincing. The best is the German experience. In 1874 Germany passed a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law. By 1897 its effects were noticeable, and during the early years of this century long periods passed without a single death from smallpox. In the huge German army there were two deaths from smallpox from 1874 to 1914. Then an unvaccinated population began to enter its borders, and the excitement of war disarranged the public health control, and smallpox appeared in the civil population, chiefly in those who had been vaccinated more than 25 years previously.

Within the last few years marked improvement in the preparation of smallpox vaccine has been made. In 1891 Monckton Compton found that the virus was purified and preserved with glycerin. But now we get our virus from an unborn chicken by opening the shell under sterile conditions, and the safety of the vaccine is practically complete.

Numerology Hits Shoes.

Paris (AP).—Numerology has left its mark on shoes. A Paris bootmaker is cutting numbers out of kid and joining them together to make oddly patterned toes and heels for sandals. Green sixes, yellow fives and royal blue sevens all get together in such a sly way it takes looking to find them. For luck, one of the models has a red kid heel on which is stiched a navy blue "13."

Susan Ertz, Novelist, Will Visit Here in Fall

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Among the famous figures in the world of art and literature who will visit in Washington this autumn will be Susan Ertz, the novelist, who will arrive early in October from London and will visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Coleridge C. Ertz, of 3220 Connecticut avenue.

Coming to America in connection with the publication of her latest novel, "No Hearts to Break," Miss Ertz will spend some time in New York during her visit but will come on to the Capital as soon as possible to see her relatives, including her 4-month-old nephew, Stephen Coleridge Ertz who was born here.

Judging from her photographs Miss Ertz looks a good deal more like a mannequin than a bookmaker. Slim and Willowy, she parts her hair in the middle and draws it back smothly, Duchess-of-Windsor fashion, and favors trim, tailored attire very much in the mode made famous by the former Wallis Warfield.

Has Spent Much Time in America

Returning to America is something of a homecoming for Miss Ertz, for athough she was born in England her parents are native New Yorkers and she has spent a number of years in this country. At a very early age, in fact, she started shuttling back and forth across the Atlantic, and since then has divided her time between England and America.

Like many writers, Miss Ertz had ambitions to be something else at first. She studied painting for several years, and even now, despite the strenuous work of turning out stories and novels at top speed, she finds time to paint when she is vacationing with her husband, J. Ronald McCrindle, at their fourteenth century country place in Sussex.

Her artistic proclivities may have stemmed from the six years she spent in the pine forests of the Sierra Nevada of California during her girlhood. In one autobiographical account she averred, "those long, happy summers in the pine forests of the Sierras are unforgettable."

Her ambitions for a career were put aside during the war while she did canteen work for American soldiers from late in 1917 until after the Armistice. Then she remained in England to marry Mr. McCrindle, who is now manager and director of the British Airways.

Since 1922, when her first novel, "Madame Claire," appeared, her fame has grown steadily. Her "Now East, Now West," which explains in the form of a novel the chief differences between the English and American mentality, gained particularly favorable attention on both sides of the Atlantic. Now, with a number of novels and scores of short stories to her credit, she is considered one of the outstanding writers of the time.

Prefers Ideas To Wrist Watches

According to reliable reports, Miss Ertz does not number other women writers among her intimate friends. She prefers to meet and mingle with men and women of all types and all conditions. She is bored by motion pictures, but enjoys dancing, fishing and travel and, most of all, good conversation. Discussing her fondness for the latter, she once said, "I would rather have a new idea, even if it is given me by somebody else, than a diamond wrist watch any day."

Miss Ertz has a sister, Mrs. Mary E. Will, who lives in Rochester, N. Y., and a brother, Lawrence Ertz, in Los Angeles. Her other brother, Coleridge Ertz, who has been a Washington resident for the last three years, is with the Civil Service Commission.

Richard Baldwin Gives Program This Afternoon

RICHARD BALDWIN, one of the outstanding younger pianists in America, will give a short program this afternoon for friends invited by his parents, Col. and Mrs. Theodore Baldwin, to the apartment of Mrs. Baldwin's sister, Miss Katherine Judge, 1785 Massachusetts avenue.

The Baldwins, who now are making their home in New York, have often been stationed in Washington and have a host of friends here. For the past few weeks they have been occupying Miss Judge's apartment. Earlier this summer, while Col. Baldwin was recuperating from a severe illness, they spent some time in Texas and in Florida.

Their son, who will appear in concert here at Consitution Hall November 11, studied at the Julliard School of Music and for the past three years has had a fellowship at the Julliard Graduate School. A pupil of James Friskin, one of the greatest exponents of Bach in this generation, Mr. Baldwin has won acclaim not only as a concert pianist but also as a composer. His appearance at Carnegie Hall June 12 was favorably received by noted critics.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

A BOUNCING BOY has arrived at the home of the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Herbert Scholz, according to news received from Germany. Christened Mannfried, the child was born at the home of Lelo's parents in Frankfort. She is the daughter of Georg von Schnitzler, leading German industrialist, and this is her second son.

Herbert expects to return the end of September from a vacation in Germany and will take up residence at the Chevy Chase Club until Lelo joins him late in October.

Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, Naval Attache of the Embassy, has booked passage home on September 7, for a vacation of several weeks.

NOTHING EVER HAPPENS on the island of Sark—at least, that's what the natives thought until l'affaire Abell-Pearson. On this channel island, three and a half miles by one and a half, the two-cell jail has been empty for five years, there is no unemployment problem, and there wasn't even much gossip until Drew Pearson dropped out of the skies and snatched George Abell's son away.

George Abell was frequently seen with the Dame de Sark, absolute ruler of this feudal municipality, when she visited Washington before her marriage to Robert Hathaway, and it is possible he was visiting her and the Seigneur at the time his child was seized. Mr. Hathaway is a brother of Harrison Hathaway, of Bethesda, and with Mrs. Hathaway visited Washington for several weeks last winter.

A BEER PARTY for some midshipmen was given yesterday by Beverly Moffet and another Navy junior, Marie Tawresey, at the Moffett home on Massachusetts avenue. The affair was in honor of Beverly's brother, Charles, who has just come home from the annual midshipmen cruise which took him to the island of Madeira, London, Germany and Paris. Beverly, who is the daughter of the late Rear Admiral Moffett, has three brothers, and all are in the Navy.

Mrs. Moffett and her daughter have been spending the summer at their country place, Happy Landing, near Leesburg. Beverly attends all the Annapolis hops with the greatest regularity, and was voted the most popular "drag" of 1937. There were about 30 present at her party yesterday.

FRANCES MONTAGUE HILL, cousin of the Duchess of Windsor, and her mother, Mrs. C. Phillips Hill, have returned to Washington after a visit to California, where they were guests of Commander and Mrs. George Murray. They came back via Canada. After a stay here they will go to Wakefield Manor, the country home of Mrs. George Barnett.

Miss Hill resembles her cousin strikingly, even to parting her hair in the middle. She has the same trim figure as the Dutchess, but is blonder, and, of course, a good deal younger.

Most of the Senators and Representatives have by this time gone for good, but Edith Nourse Rogers intends to commute back and forth to Washington. Two prominent West Virginia families were united last Friday, when Miss Kathryn Eckels Beltzhoover, of Shepherdstown, became the bride of Dr. Fred N. Hess, of Fairmont, W. Va. Both Dr. and Mrs. Hess have an extensive circle of friends in Washington.

The ceremony was performed in Shepherdstown by the Rev. John Fray of St. Peters Lutheran Church. Members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends witnessed the wedding.

The bride wore a modish emerald crepe gown piped with gold kid and set off with matching accessories and a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Morris Beltzhoover, of Shepherdstown, and was educated at Randolph Macon Women's College, Shepherd College, the West Virginia University School of Music and the New England Conservatory.

Mrs. Hess descended on her maternal side from some of the earliest settlers of Shepherdstown, and on her paternal side from pioneers of the Cumberland Valley, Pennsylvania. Among her distinguished ancestors was Gen. Sam Houston.

Dr. Hess, a graduate of the Ohio College of Dental Surgery, is a former president of the West Virginia Dental Society. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Hess, descending from pioneer families of Marion County, West Virginia. Dr. and Mrs. Hess will live in Fairmont.

Robert Bingham To Visit Capital

Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, who recently arrived in this country, is expected to motor to Washington today from Baltimore, where he has been visiting Dr. Hugh H. Young. While in Washington he will call on Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

All rumors to the contrary, informed sources believe, Ambassador Bingham is not being "recalled," and his appearance in Washington does not mean any diplomatic changes but merely vacation at home.

Before his appointment, he already had made many trips to England and Scotland. If he decides to make a trip through the Southern States after his call here, it would be no surprise, for he was born in North Carolina, attended his father's school at Asheville and studied at the universities of North Carolina, Virginia, Louisville and Kentucky. William and Mary awarded him a Phi Beta Kappa key.

Belmont House Garden Transformed by Expert

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The historic garden of Alvah Belmont House, now headquarters of the Woman's Party, is being transformed this summer under the hands of an expert and devoted gardener, Mrs. Frederick L. Ransome. On the hottest Saturday of the torrid month of August, she was supervising the pruning of trees and the resetting of fine old box hedge.

Mrs. Ransome was a resident of Washington for 50 years before going West to make her home. She was twice president of the American Association of University Women here and an active member of the Woman's Party from 1920. In addition to her interest in club and civic affairs, she always found time for gardening. Believing that gardens, like charity, should begin at home, she gave her time chiefly to that at the rear of her residence on Belmont street. One day a friendly voice reached her as she bent over her flowers: "I wish I could find a house in this neighborhood; we could have a good time gardening together."

The stranger was Miss Henrietta Mueller. Mrs. Ransome located a house for her nearby and later learned much of scientific care of plants from this neighbor as their garden friendship became a firm and lasting one. It was from her Mrs. Ransome gained knowledge of the pruning of roses and, while she supervises much of the other work in her gardens, she never entrusts this to anyone else.

Gardens Her First Interest

Her coming, like that of the springtime, means that a garden is sure to grow. She moved from here to Tuscon, Ariz., where her husband, the late Dr. Ransome, went as dean of the graduate school of the University of Arizona. The first thing she did at their home there was to begin landscaping the grounds and planting flowers and shrubs. From there they went to Pasadena, where Dr. Ransome had the chair of economic geology at the Institute of Technology, until his death in 1935. In Pasadena, another garden bears testimony to Mrs. Ransome's skill in horticulture, and at South Laguna Beach, her summer home, is still another, growing with sea plants which thrive in the salt spray from the Pacific Ocean which beats against the high bluff they beautify.

On her frequent visits to Washington—six of her transcontinental trips have been made by air—Mrs. Ransome has divided her time between the garden at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. N. Baxter, not far from their old residence on Belmont street, and that at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Edwin C. Fry. Mrs. Fry and her husband have recently bought Fairhill Farm, at Lincolnville, Md., which offers ample opportunity for landscaping and gardening plans, but not enough for so enthusiastic a gardener.

Miss Harrison Contributes Roses

Alva Belmont House, in which she is interested both as a member of the Woman's Party and as a public-spirited citizen with a reverence for historic landmarks, offered another opportunity to "garden." With no funds available for landscaping, she is making the best of what is already there, and also is planting additional roses, given by Miss Carrie Harrison. Miss Harrison, who is one of the members of the Woman's Party, was the first woman appointed to a position of distinction in the Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Ransome is planting the Mexican rose of the mountains, a climbing vine with rose-colored tendrils, as a background for the rose garden. She has replanted the old dwarf box bushes so as to mark off the garden; has widened the paths, reset the iris with proper spacing, and has extended the lawn by rearrangement of the shrubs. An old milepost found on the grounds she has placed as a step passing from the rose garden into the rock garden, which she is now planning, around the sunken terrace flanking the old coach house, used as a tea room.

The house chairman, Mrs. Norman Underwood, has approved Mrs. Ransome's plans for grading the northeast section of the grounds and making the sunken terrace with a wall and rock garden. A little ledge in the northeast corner, overhanging the terrace, with be planted with bamboo and lilies, suggested by the lines of the Chinese poet, Tu-Fu, "I seek a corner where the bamboo grows, and lovely lilies offer cool repose."

The pergola, overgrown with climbing roses, is to be improved. In it now are two hand-made benches and a table, given by Miss Harrison.

Won Distinction At Bryn Mawr

Mrs. Ransome during her college days was a fellow of chemistry in Bryn Mawr and studied later at Heidelburg and the University of Berlin. During the World War she was chairman of the Woman's Land Army of the District of Columbia, whose two camps of farmerettes saved the crops of 28 farmers in Montgomery and Princes Georges counties. Her husband, as a member of the Geological Survey, made the report on which were based the operations at Boulder Dam, and served as consulting engineer during its construction.

In Pasadena, Mrs. Ransome was president of the Faculty Women's Club of the Institute of Technology and organized the successful Women's Flower Exchange. She also had charge of the flower booth of the Pasadena Settlement Association.

She expects to return to the Coast the last of next month, but will be back in Washington before Christmas.

Let-Down Shelf.

A let-down shelf in the cabinet in the small room will prove useful for a writing, dressing or work table. When it has been used it may be pushed back into place.

Peace League Asks President To Act in China

Withdrawal of Americans Without Fighting Urged by D. C. Women.

FROM A SPECIAL emergency meeting called by the District of Columbia branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom yesterday afternoon, the following telegram was sent to the President at Hyde Park:

Mr. President: The District of Columbia branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, at a special meeting held at headquarters in Washington this afternoon, urges you most solemly to act immediately upon the following points: (1) an order to the Admiral in charge of the United States forces in China that under no circumstances shall there be retaliatory fire; (2) an early date set for the evacuation of all Americans after which date our military and naval forces be withdrawn; (3) the neutrality act to be applied; (4) a world economic conference be called by you for an early date, at which a sincere endeavor to meet the economic needs of all have-not nations be made and that Secretary Hull be requested to invite China and Japan to cease hostilities pending the outcome of this conference. Respectfully yours,

ELEANOR FRIEDMAN,
LEE BELL.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Eleanor Friedman. Mrs. George T. Bell presided. "We hold," said Mrs. Bell, in opening the meeting, "that no matter how the declared policies of the governments of Japan and China may differ, the men, women and children of each country are equally vulnerable to suffering and death. Therefore, no matter how great the provocation, no American gun should be trained against either side."

Summer Art Exhibition Attracts Visitors From Many Lands.

Old Lyme, Conn.—The Lyme Art Association will open its gallery at Old Lyme Wednesday, September 1, with a complete change of large oil paintings, supplemented by small pictures, miniatures and sculpture. All work will be by association members, and the gallery will be open to the public each week day from 10 to 6 o'clock and Sunday afternoons through September 26. A first award at this, the group's fifth annual autumn show, will be a cash prize of $100, anonymously given, to be voted by association members to the best picture in the exhibition. The hanging committee will be Platt Hubbard, Gregory Smith, Ivan G. Olinsky, James G. McManus and Lucien Abrams.

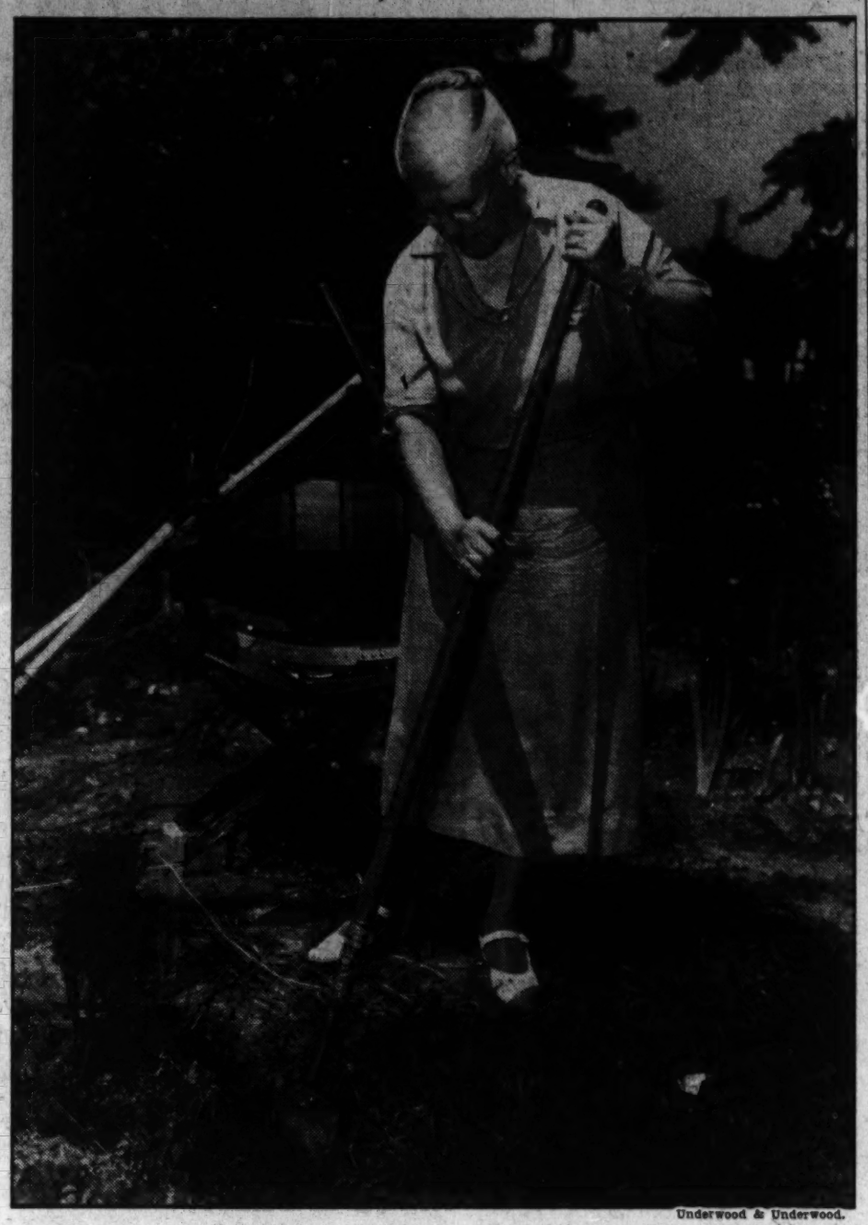

The current exhibition has broken several records. Attendance, sales and increased associate membership have exceeded marks of the last eight years. New associate members of the Lyme group include residents of Pennsylvania, Illinois, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts. Visitors this season have registered from almost every State and from every continent. Recently a single day's signatures in the gallery guest register indicated callers from 12 different States, Ecuador and Cuba. The association's artist membership now includes 18 members of the National Academy and eight members who have captured prizes apart from Old Lyme group awards within the present year. The new show to open September 1 will embrace the most recent work by these and others affiliated with the Lyme group.

Luncheon Held For Girl Guides

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who is also honorary night superintendent of the New York Zoo, will be the guest of honor today at a luncheon party to be held by 25 Girl Guides from foreign countries and 62 American Girl Scouts. The foreign Girl Guides have been attending the International Girl Guide and Girl Scout encampment at Briarcliff Manor, New York. They will sail from New York for their homes tomorrow.

The trip was arranged by the Girl Scout Federation of New York, of which Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., is chairman. While Mrs. Roosevelt is absent in the Orient, she has always taken a deep interest in the international Girl Scout and Girl Guide work. One of the most important parties ever given for Girl Scouts in the District of Columbia was given by Mrs. Roosevelt when she was the wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Girl Guides were also among the guests.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 30.

THE LONG-EXPECTED revolt against the glamour girl seems to have exploded in full force. Every one of us who thumps a keyboard for a living has over-used this term, so devilishly handy to describe the modern minx whose sheen, and gloss and pumped-up personality have made her interesting, admired and exploited.

ALICE HUGHES.

A men's magazine recently featured an article called 'Glamour Girl, You Bore Me." I cheerlessly admit the triteness of the appellation, but I don't think the G. G. herself bores nearly as many citizens as did her colorless predecessors, before Hollywood and professional mannequins taught them how to glamorize and acquire a high polish!

The professional model still rules the current scene here. No matter how fast the movies or the men snatch them from before the camera, fresh phalanxes of fresh and unspoiled beauts rush to Gotham and fill the depleted ranks.

John Powers who runs the largest mannequin stable here and is said to have peered at over a million delectable doll-babies during his 16 years in the business, has a new word to explain what makes models truly great in their trade. It is dear old "flair"—about as hard to define precisely as "swing" when applied to jazz music. But John knows what he means, and also knows when a girl has it. "It's naturalness, charm, personality and other things," says Maestro Powers.

For those with a modeling career in mind, John has these words: "We're looking for natural beauty and wholesomeness. Too many girls are spoiling their natural good looks by trying to be sophisticated or exotic. Be yourself!"

Natural and wholesome—those are the current keynotes. But is the "Glamour Girl" on the way out? Not on your best compact! Not till something better turns up, and you name it! I don't know!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sylvia Sidney burst into the new Lily Dache building on East Fifty-sixth street the other day, ordered a dozen hats and seemed in such bounding spirits that someone was driven to ask the star why all the hi-de-ho on a rainy morning. "Why, my part in 'To Quito and Back,' said small Sidney, "is the only one I've had in years that hasn't forced me to cry and beller all through the drama or film!" Of course, most of us would feel right snappy if able to snatch up a dozen new toppers! . . .

* * * *

Prepare yourself to learn the last word in fancy posy-arranging this fall! I hear that Constance Spry (there's a name!), a famous British flower-fixer who did the Buckingham Palace nosegays during the brief tenancy of Edward VIII, is headed our way for a lecture tour in October. I suppose we shall have to bring our own blooms . . .

Sally Eilers, the little movie girl, came in on the Queen Mary the other day smelling so sweet that the whole pier seemed to be a-sniff. I asked her what the compelling scent was, and she said it was "Frou Frou de Gardenia"—not a newcomer from Paris, but one of our very own.

Noel Coward—the writing, acting singing and dancing darlings of the sophisticates—is coming back to our shores to see the Ameddican premiere of a London hit, "George and Margaret." Null will spend some time visiting his pal, Alexander Woollcott. And a report is rife here that it will be "Sir Noel" when the King's next honors list is announced in London. Well, if ever a British author deserved a knighthood, Noel rates one for his imperial gem, "Cavalcade!" . . .

* * * *

We're happy that ever-gorgeous Ina Claire (nee Fagan) is coming back to our stage, after two years' absence, as the star of "Barchester Towers," adapted from a Trollope novel!

* * * *

Local reporters leaped at the chance to ask pretty Mrs. Harpo Marx, wife of the pantomimic zany of the comic family, how it felt to be married to a famous clown. Her reply, it seems to me, was a classic: "I suppose he is not much different from any other husband," she said, "except that he can play a harp!" She might have added, of course, that Harpo makes right nice money, too.

Mrs. Meritt Plans New Series Of Federation Radio Programs

'Education for Living' to Be Topic of Talks by Leaders; 'Government Begins at Home' Is October Subject.

MRS. EDGAR B. MERITT, who has served the District Federation of Women's Clubs as president and as chairman of many important departments, now holds the important post of chairman of the general federation committee on radio.

Mrs. Meritt has arranged a series of programs on "Education for Living" to begin in October and to be held Thursday of each month until the end of June. This series aroused much interest among clubwomen last season.

Mrs. Meritt has had frequent conferences with Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation, and Miss Margaret Cuthbert, director of woman's activities of the National Broadcasting Company, in regard to plans for the programs.

"Government Begins at Home" will be the subject of the first program in October. Mrs. Lawson will be the speaker and will outline the aims of the federation and the program for the year.

Qualified authorities on civic affairs also will be heard on this program.

The November program will stress "education through modern mediums." The speakers will be important in motion-picture, literary, radio and newspaper circles.

"Will the American Home Survive?" will be the topic in December. The January program will be devoted to "Crime Prevention and Control." Public health experts will be heard on the "Wisdom of Health" program in January. "Bills We All Help to Pay" will be the subject of the round-table discussion on bills before Congress in which the general federation is interested in February.

Since so many women's organizations will be meeting in Washington in April, the topic for that month will be "Women in Public Life." Nationally known women will be the speakers.

Dramatization of the life of rural women especially related to club activities will be a feature of the "How the Rural Woman Meets Life" program in May.

An international forum on "Effect of Organized Womanhood on Civilization" will feature the June program. Women from the United States and foreign countries will be the speakers.

County Bars Police Force From Politics

Prince Georges Also Forbids Changes in Warrants.

New Manual for Force Tightens Rules on Bondsmen.

Prince Georges County police are forbidden to engage in politics under regulations embodied in a 44-page manual, to be issued tomorrow. The new order states:

"Members of the force shall not solicit or make contribution in money or other things, directly or indirectly, on any pretext, to any person, committee or association for political purposes; nor shall they engage in any plan or scheme for raising money for any such organizations or individuals, nor take an active part in behalf of any candidate for poltical office."

Last winter, after seven policemen, a justice of the peace and a bondsman had been involved in a public scandal growing out of the arrest of motorists on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, a number of civic groups, led by the County Federation of Citizens Associations, launched a campaign to free the force from political domination.

Irregularities Charged.

It was charged that political influence led to laxity and other irregularities.

The new orders also forbid police to "change of modify a charge after a warrant has been issued," and require that prisoners be taken before the "nearest available justice of the peace" to be charged.

On the subject of bondsmen, the new rules require printed lists of all professional bondsmen in the county to be kept in the Hyattsville and Upper Marlboro substations.

Officers and desk clerks are forbidden to recommend any particular bondsman. They must, on request, furnish defendents with the printed lists.

Police and other employes of the department also are forbidden to accept compensation from bondsmen. Police are prohibited from allowing bondsmen or their representatives from entering the police stations to solicit business.

It was ordered that arrested persons be given trial as soon after their arrest as possible. Under the police court system, sessions are held Monday afternoons and Wednesdays at Hyattsville and Fridays at Upper Marlboro. Under this setup, a person arrested at Marlboro on a Saturday would have to wait until the following Friday for his trial.

Drinking Forbidden.

For violations of the regulations, policemen may be punished in whatever way the Board of Police Commissioners may decide. Some of the punishable offenses are:

"Feigning illness or disability in order to evade performance of duty.

"Receiving money or other valuable considerations contrary to the rules and regulations of the department or the laws in force in Prince Georges County.

"Willfully maltreating or using unnecessary violence toward a prisoner or other persons.

"Neglect or refusal to pay a just debt contracted during time of service, provided the debt, unless admitted, shall be evidenced by a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction.

"Conduct unbecoming an officer, which may include, in addition to acts detrimental to good discipline or tending to bring discredit on the force, violation of any law of the United States or of any law, municipal ordinance, or police regulations of Prince Georges County.

$561,000 Asked By Playgrounds For Next Year

Budget Increased 183%; ABC Also Seeking More Funds.

District playgrounds followed the example of all other departments yesterday and asked for a huge increase in its 1939 budget. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, however, was different. It asked for only a small increase.

Proposing to open 17 recreational centers at the beginning of the next fiscal year, Miss Sibyl Baker, playgrounds supervisor, submitted estimates totaling $561,010, which was $351,430 or 183 per cent greater than current appropriations.

The ABC Board asked for a full-time assistant corporation counsel and submitted a budget of $47,380 or an increase of $4,940 over present funds.

"Co-ordination of the recreational program has advanced to a point where major recreational centers must be put into operation with adequate supervision," Miss Baker explained.

The playgrounds supervisor asked $266,000 for improvement and completion of playgrounds and recreation centers. Of this, $80,000 would be used for construction of a recreation building and instruction pool at the Hoover Playground.

The 17 major recreation centers which Miss Baker proposes to open next July if the funds are approved are:

The A. B. C. Board asked $3,800 for its special counsel "to be assigned exclusively to full-time duties in this department."

The board also requested $1,140 to cover three positions that were re-allocated during the present fiscal year.

Two-Year Sentence For Oil Royalty Sales

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Winton L. Googins, of Seattle, Washington, had been sentenced to two years imprisonment after pleading guilty to a charge of having violated the securities act of 1933, and the mail fraud statute, in the sale of oil royalties.

The commission also announced that it had obtained a permanent injunction in the United States District Court for the Western District of Virginia, at Harrisonburg, Va., to prevent further violation of the securities act by Walter P. Spielberger, C. E. Wheeler and Roland H. Spielberger in the sale of oil royalty securities. The decree was signed by Judge John Paul.

Eskimo Came From Siberia, Expert Claims

Two Types Migrated to Alaska, North Canada, Dr. Collins Says.

The Eskimos of Alaska and Canada unquestionably had their origin in Northern Eurasia, Dr. Henry B. Collins, assistant curator of ethnology at the Smithsonian Institution, said yesterday.

Dr. Collins said he discovered new evidence of the Eskimos' Siberian origin in an expedition last summer to St. Lawrence Island, on the rim of the Arctic Circle.

The Smithsonian Institution expert said the migrating tribes first crossed from Siberia, migrating as far east as Greenland, and then turned back to Alaska.

The mixed cultures of the Eskimo tribes have bewildered ethnologists for almost a century. Dr. Collins explained, however, that two separate types came out of Asia. One was a coast-dwelling, fisher type; the other an inland people, who were essentially hunters.

Dr. Collins' most recent study, just published by the Smithsonian, last year won the gold medal of the Royal Academy of Science and Letters of Denmark as the outstanding contribution to knowledge of the Eskimo's origins and migrations.

Bridegroom Held, Police Say He Stole Truck for Wedding

Because he "borrowed" a truck to get to his wedding, Lemuel Gillikin was in jail last night, charged with grand larceny, and his 22-year-old bride-to-be was waiting, presumably in Alexandria.

Gillikin, 26, and red-haired, of 208 Tenth street northwest, told police he found himself in Washington and with no transportation available as the hour approached for his wedding. So, police say he leaped into an unoccupied plumbing truck and set off.

The truck, owned by Frank Jackson, of 1322 S street southeast, careened into a tree and Alexandria police arrested Gillikin. He was afterw. ' brought to Washington, where the larceny charge was made against him.

100 Visitors Inspect Results Of D. C. Tuberculosis Camp

The District Tuberculosis Association's health camp on Bald Eagle Hill opened its doors yesterday to about 100 distinguished visitors, just to show them what a mere seven weeks can do toward improving the health and appearance of its 125 campers. An impressive exhibit it was, too, in the opinion of the association's board members, District officials and others who made up the party.

With one week of the present season left, weight charts showed that to date the campers, many of whom arrived at camp only within the last two or three weeks, had gained a total of 577¾ pounds, an average of 4.56 pounds per child. Actually, of course, most of them gained much more. Ten-year-old Mary Paxton holds the record of 10½ pounds. James Prebble, 11, is high for the boys with 8¼ pounds. One of the newcomers has gained 3¼ pounds in the week he has been there.

A tour of the four dormitories, where the children were taking their three-hour afternoon rest, proved to the guests that the campers' morale had soared in proportion to their weight. Those who were present July 7, opening day, contrasted the quiet solemn-eyed children of last month with the giggling youngsters who squirmed on the cots yesterday, so full of energy that the counselors had their hands full keeping order.

Chicken New to Many.

All have acquired a new appreciation of cleanliness, as was evidenced by the enthusiasm which greeted the signal for showers. Many of the children never had been in shower baths before this summer and kicked and screamed in protest at the beginning. Now they prolong the daily bath as long as possible.

Showers over, they dressed (in sun-suits made on WPA sewing projects) and filed into the mess hall, singing "Onward Health Camp Campers" to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers." And the way they attacked their supper was sufficient explanation of their gain in weight.

The first meals at camp were a great surprise to many of the children from poorer homes, the counselors say.

Others never had tasted chicken. "Chicken and ice cream day," observed twice a week, is the most popular on the camp's calendar.

The unprecedented amount of milk which is given them to drink prompted one child to inquire where it came from. It developed he never had seen a cow, so Miss Sara Shriner, the camp nurse, took him down the road and pointed one out to him.

For the benefit of yesterday's visitors, the children put on a floor show during their supper.

According to Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association, who acted as hostess, the location of the new camp is its chief advantage over the camps of previous years. The children suffered less from homesickness, she said, because they had the new thrill of living in the country.

"And it's wonderful to have these new buildings, the clinic and the dormitories instead of tents to sleep in," she added.

According to Dr. Coulter, "It's nice to know that at least for a couple of months the contact with the pulmonary case in the home has been broken. Care given the children at the camp is added protection against infection when they return home."

Many Win Honors.

In 38 of the homes from which the children come, there is an active case of pulmonary tuberculosis. In 18 more of the families represented there is an active pulmonary case which has been hospitalized. Of the 30 families in which there apparently is no serious pulmonary case either at home or in a hospital, the children themselves are suffering from active childhood tuberculosis.

Many of the children wore "the cross of the Crusaders," a small replica of the double cross symbolizing the fight against tuberculosis. These are awarded at the Sunday night candle-light services to campers who have won distinction for ther good behavior.

The campers themselves provide the best testimonials as to the success of the season. Ask 11-year-old Ruby Reed, for instance. Ruby was one of the 65 who were prevented by lack of Christmas seal funds from coming to the camp at its opening, but someone's generosity sent her there three weeks ago. Since then she has gained 6½ pounds, has decided the camp has "swell counselors" and has learned to like the country. "It's nice to have the outdoors around you all the time," was her way of putting it.

The Army truck was operated by Joseph Keen, 24, of Walter Reed Hospital, and the other vehicle by Melvin Greenberg, 17, of 1205 Fifteenth street northwest. Greenberg was charged with reckless driving, and released under $500 bond. Goldenhorn was treated at the Walter Reed Hospital for lacerations of the forehead and upper lip and injuries to his right arm. He was removed to Emergency Hospital.

One person was slightly injured when a Capital Transit bus was over by an automobile at Thirty-eighth and Veazey streets northwest. Food Dealers To Stay Here Despite Tax

Gross Receipts Levy to Be Fought in Congress and Courts.

Wholesale food dealers don't like the new District gross receipts tax, but they are not sufficiently indignant to move to nearby Virginia, it was indicated at a meeting last night.

R. D. Marshall, comptroller of the Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corporation, who presided, pointed out Virginia taxes would be even more onerous than those here. He mentioned the Virginia tax on purchases—$20 for the first $10,000 and 13 cents for every $100 over that. Then, he said, the retailer had to pay a tax based on sales—$20 for the first $2,000 and 13 cents on every $100 over that.

In addition, Marshall reminded the District wholesale merchants, there is a Virginia personal property tax of $2.70 for every $100 of value, and a 3.3 per cent income tax.

"In the face of that," Marshall said after the meeting, "it is perfectly ridiculous to talk of moving into Virginia."

Tax Law to Be Tested.

The wholesalers, however, made it clear they would fight to have food products eliminated from the tax bill by the next Congress. Abraham Abrams, a baker and tax consultant, announced he would go into court to test the constitutionality of the tax law.

The city's commission merchants will meet to consider the tax law at 2 p. m. today.

During the day District officials said they were not disturbed by threats of local wholesale food dealers to move to Arlington County to escape the two-fifths of 1 per cent gross receipts tax. They explained they were powerless to stop any exodus or to waive the tax.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen instructed Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen to make a study of comparative taxes in Washington and nearby Virginia.

Protection Not Equal.

He expressed the belief any businesses which may move to Arlington County will pay as much taxes in the aggregate as they would in Washington and would not have equal police and fire protection.

The Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, it was understood, mailed out invitations to thousands of Washington business houses to move to Virginia.

Jo V. Morgan, special assistant corporation counsel, who is drafting regulations for administering the business privilege tax, said some of the complaining wholesale food dealers would come under the provision for commission merchants. This limits the tax to the commission or profit made by the commission merchant.

All wholesale dealers, however, who buy and sell their own products, he said, will have to pay the tax on gross receipts.

Southpaw Checks Cincinnati With Tying Run on Base; Three-Run Rally in Third Is Decisive.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—History and the Giants repeated today. Just a year ago and five days after they climaxed one of the game's greatest stretch drives in taking over first place in the National League, they duplicated the performance today with a tight 4-to-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The win, achieved through the homer-hitting ability of Mel Ott and Johnny McCarthy, and the airtight relief pitching of King Carl Hubbell, put them in the lead by the slim margin of two percentage points over the Chicago Cubs, who were idle.

The victory gave them a record of 71 victories and 46 defeats for the year, for a .607 percentage. The Cubs have won 72, lost 47, for a .605 mark.

It was the New Yorkers' fifth straight win and the thirty-seventh against 21 losses in the surge they started from third place more than two months ago. For the first time since June 13 they climbed back to the top of one of the tightest races ever in the National League, while the Cubs, who have been out in front since mid-June, found themselves the chasers instead of the chased.

By virtue of a three-run rally in the third, featured by Ott's twenty-eighth homer with a mate on base, and another tally on McCarthy's homer in the sixth, the Giants appeared to have the game on ice.

But Cliff Melton, the lank left-hander, who had allowed the Reds only one hit through the first six innings, blew up in the seventh and was tagged for three runs. A walk to Spud Davis, Mel Ott's error on Alex Kampouris' hopper and Lew Riggs' single brought in one run. Billy Myers then doubled to right center and sent the other two across.

Dick Coffman was called in and Melton went to the showers, but after Coffman drew a walk, and Hub Walker was sent up to bat for Kiddo Davis, Manager Bill Terry summoned Hubbell in a hurry. King Carl, none too effective for the past several days, was at the top of his form as he forced Walker to foul out to end the threat. He retired the side in order in the eighth, and allowed only one little dinky scratch hit as he saved the game through the ninth.

Collegians May Take Pros for Ride

By Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, Aug. 30.—After three years of touting the pros in the annual Soldiers Field football battle with the College All-Stars, this department is beginning to weaken. Somehow, the Pro League champions don't look like the gilt-edged dinch to beat the Collegians on Wednesday evening at Chicago. Time was when your correspondent would wager that any big-league pro team could spot the best college outfit a couple of touchdowns and hand it a thorough beating in addition to a football lesson. But I am slightly weary of that idea after what has been happening at Soldiers Field each time the All-Stars and Pro League champions meet.

POVICH.

* * * *

The pros haven't been beaten in the three years they've done battle with the pick of the College stars, but they haven't given guys like me much to crow about. A brief review of the scores doesn't reveal any tremendous edge for the pros. In the first game, in 1934, the Chicago Bears were held to a 0 to 0 tie. In 1935 the Bears beat the Collegians only 5 to 0, and in 1936 the score, as you will remember, was 7 to 7.

* * * *

The Collegians haven't been able to win one of those three games, but they weren't exactly push-overs for the Pro Bruisers. In fact, every edge except the final score belongs to the Collegians. They have outgained the pros nearly eight yards to one during the three years, and the fact is that the pros have never been able to rush the ball inside of the Collegians' 30-yard line.

Last year, as a matter of fact, the pros were very fortunate indeed to get a tie out of the proceedings. Tuffy Leemans and his pals had rushed 'em off their feet and at the end of the game had registered 16 first downs to the pros' five. It was Leemans' fumble deep in his own territory in the third quarter that permitted the Bears to score, and you remember then that they needed four downs to rush the ball across from the one-yard line.

So, as I was saying, I am beginning to weaken on the pros when they meet these collections of All-Star collegians. This is not exactly a test between the best college football and the best pro football. It is a battle between the best that can be culled from all the Nation's colleges and the best pro unit—not an All-Star pro unit. If the pros could pick the star players from all the league teams to throw in against the Collegians that would be different, but the pros are confined to the roster of the league champions.

The team that has won the National Professional League championship, the Green Bay Packers in this case, is, by all standards, a great football team. But they are being asked to meet a squad of 35 college players chosen because they were the most outstanding among several thousand of their colleagues.

* * * *

Consequently, the Collegians' coaches have a specialist for every play and it won't be a green bunch that the Packers are meeting tomorrow night. The Collegians aren't eligible for the Soldiers' Field game until after they are graduated and that means they've had four years of college football.

* * * *

The Collegians are pros after a fashion, too. They aren't playing this ball game just for the fun of it. They are paid for their services but of the proceeds. And they are not paid on the same scale. Last year, Jay Berwanger, Chicago University's big-shot who was a powerful drawing card, received $500 for his part in the game. And, it might be added, the unheralded Tuffy Leemans who was the finest player on the field that night, was the lowest paid back on the college squad, getting only $100 above expenses.

* * * *

The biggest single edge the pros appear to have is their organization. Unlike the Collegians, they have been playing as a unit for perhaps three or four years. The All-Stars went into training three weeks ago for their coaches bringing a variety of different systems of training to the Evanston camp.

Team Trophy Already Won By D.C. Stars

D. C. Government Clinches Department Cup; Latona, March Play.

While rain was forcing still another delay in the extended Government Tennis Tournament, now in progress on the Potomac Park courts, the committee announced after a calculation of results that the department trophy held by the Treasury Department, has been clinched by the District Government.

A gross accumulation of 12¾ points, figured on the committee's previously announced basis, has already been garnered by District Government representatives. The Treasury Department is runner up with 9¾ points. Other standings include Farm Credit, 5½; Federal Trade Commission, 5¼, and Patent Office, 4½.

The Ray Stocklinski-Erwin Niemeyer quarterfinal match is listed for an hour earlier with the winner scheduled to play Charles Heacock, former Missouri Valley champion at 5 p. m. for the right to meet the winner of the Latona-March match for the championship.

appearnace in those early rounds of the executioner of old. He seemed to be biding his time, trying this fellow out, getting him set for the finish. He looked all the world like some gaunt Monsieur de Paris inspecting his guillotine. Then, when he cut the rope in that seventh the blade didn't fall. And Farr, a hideous, bloody Frankenstein, stood there grinning back at him. It was then that Louis cringed. It was then that his eye had that glint of that Schmeling fight fourth round. "Was this to be another Schmeling?" he must have thought. "This over-rated coal miner!"

But the coal miner was not to be denied. This counter-puncher who stalled him around the ring held no fear for him. His unorthodox style here stood him well. He bobbed and weaved and ducked. He made Louis miss punch after punch. He made Louis look like an amateur. The champion was caught flat-footed—and couldn't take it. Hurried consultations in Louis' corner failed to kindle that old spark, just as it failed to erase two reddening lumps that stuck out menacingly on the brown skin beneath his eyes.

The champion's most effective weapon was his sledge-hammer-like left jab, the one punch that more than any other made him champion and the one punch that more than any other tonight saved his title for him. He clubbed lefts and rights to the head—but too often Farr's elbows were in the road. He swung short hooks when openings presented, he battered and pounded the Welshman, puffing and cutting his eyes, mashing his nose, splitting his lips with punishing, slicing, searing blows—but Farr stood up.

Miniature War.

The man who fought more than twice as many fights as the champion made the champion look like a schoolboy at times. Louis' penetrating, bewildering lefts spun Farr around time and time again in utter confusion. But Tommy had an assortment of blows all his own, rights and lefts in hooks and uppercuts, blows that rocked Louis' brown head again and again. But Louis was more methodical, he knew where and when to rain his punches. It was like watching the fall of a great city in warfare. First the light bombs, trimming off the tops of the houses. Next the heavy shells that uproot streets and viaducts. For war hath no fury like a champion born, and Louis is a born champion—even though he flashed his greatness seldom tonight.

Louis Only Human.

For in the last analysis, that is what won the fight for Joe. He is champion born, he is methodical, and hard to hit. But he is human and can be hurt, and, to the Welshman's never-ending credit, he hurt the champion tonight.

Farr landed the first blow of the fight, a light left to the champion's stomach. Not a damaging blow, but clearly an indication of the wrath to come. The champion sparred cautiously, only to be rushed repeatedly by the Welshman, who wanted to finish this business early. Farr won the round. He won it clearly and cleanly, and showed the howling multitude that here was not a Baer or a Levinsky, but a Welsh coal miner who would stand up and fight.

Farr Dogged.

Farr surprised with his ruggedness, the dogged determination that he was in a fight and that the other man was not better, certainly not as good as he. Joe took three straight lefts to the nose as the second round opened, but remained cold. Farr bounced the champion on the ropes with a good right and ended the round in a flurry of punches. Certainly Farr's round on The Post's score sheet.

Louis seemed to come to life in the third, seemed to realize that he had dropped the first two rounds, by narrow margins, yes, but dropped them just the same. He straightened Farr out repeatedly with his deadly left hook. Farr tried some in-fighting—his one specialty. But Louis straightened him out again with those lefts—a whole

Von Cramm, Henkel Win Over Budge, Mako in Three Sets

Germans Swamp American Aces, 6–4, 7–5, 6–4, in Stunning Upset to Capture United States National Doubles Crown.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 30.—The third try succeeded for Baron Gottfried Von Cramm and Henner Henkle, of Germany, today as they became the first foreign winners of the National Doubles tennis crown since 1919 by defeating defending champions Don Budge and Gene Mako, 6—4, 7—5, 6—4, at Longwood.

When they faced off against the Americans today they vowed they would not be overtaken as they had been twice before at Wimbledon.

Budge and Mako spotted the German stars the first two sets before defeating them in the All-England doubles final and about two weeks later the Americans came from behind again for a four-set triumph over Von Cramm and Henkel in a Davis Cup interzone finals doubles match.

Defending champions in each of the tourney's other four divisions were also dethroned during the sultry, sunless afternoon.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, and Alice Marble, the National Singles queen, became the women's doubles champions by turning back last year's winners, Mrs. John Van Ryn and Carolin Babcock, 7—5, 6—4.

R. L. and Laird Watt, of Montreal, won their third father-son title since 1933 by overcoming the 1936 titlists, W. J. Clothier, jr., and 2d., Philadelphia, 6—4, 7—5. The elder Clothier and Dwight F. Davis, donor of the prized international trophy, were forced to surrender their veterans title to L. W. Baker, Washington, and J. G. McKay, Miami, by a 6—3, 4—6, 6—2 margin.

Mako Loses Twice.

The fifth abdication was the most humiliating of all, for Miss Marble and Mako wore their mixed doubles crowns only as far as the quarter-final round, where the diadems dropped off when they bowed to Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, New York, and Jiro Yamagishi, Japan, 6—0, 6—3.

The reserved but affable Von Cramm was wildly jubilant, for him, when he and the 21-year-old Henkel carried away the huge silver trophies that were the rewards of their smashing victory over a team that was rated as the greatest in amateur tennis.

"Henkel was magnificent," he said. "We kept forcing all the way, and when we dropped behind in

Indians Overcome Early Lead, Win 7-6 Decision Over Nats

Syd Cohen Tagged for Final Tally

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Aug. 30.—Changing their minds about the whol thing, the Cleveland Indians took back a ball game they had apparently given to the Nats earlier in the afternoon. The Indian givers won, in the ninth, 7 to 6.

They had tossed four juicy errors into the proceeding- to give the Washingtons a 6-3 lead as late as the sixth inning but, then with some encouragement from Syd Cohen, the Indians reclaimed the ball game.

They pounded two runs across the plate against Cohen in the sixth, they tied the score in the eighth with the help of Cecil Travis' error, and they jolted the winning run out of Cohen in a speedy ninth.

Galehouse Singles.

Dennis Galehouse, the Indians' second relief pitcher, started the ninth inning business by surprising everybody, himself included, with a short ingle to right field. Lyn Lary laid down the conventional sacrifice bunt that put Galehouse on second, and then Johnny Kroner, who hadn't made any of the Indians' 12 hits to that point, broke up the ball game with a hot-shot single that just grazed Buddy Myer's glove and skipped into center field.

Monte Weaver crammed a lot of damage—to the Nats—into the only inning he pitched. Before he could get the Indians out in the first they cuffed him around for three runs and the Nats were off to a sour start.

Monte got the first two Injuns out, but there was some delay in getting that third guy out. Because Earl Averill belted a single against the nearby rightfield wall and Weaver walked Trosky. Big Julius Solters then made Weaver pay by socking a mighty three-bagger over Al Simmons' head against the 375-foot fence in left and two Injuns were home. Solters came home a bit later when Campbell beat out a hit to Travis. But don't get Travis wrong. He was lucky to lay his hands on the hot smash.

Then, in the second inning, the Nats came up with two cheap runs against Willis Hudlin on only one hit. The Indians began handling the ball like a hot potato and the first thing you knew, two Washington runners were home. It was an awful exhibit, really.

Hudlin had two out when Buddy Myer bashed a single to center. Simmons then bounced a grounder to Lyn Lary who had an easy play at first but for some reason elected to throw to second and heaved the ball past Johnny Kroner against the rightfield boxes. Before Outfielder Campbell could recover the thing, Myer was on third and dashing for home and Simmons, too, was going places. Campbell's heave to the plate skipped through Sullivan's legs and Simmons, whose meek grounder had started the whole business didn't stop running until he crossed the plate.

Cohen Impressive.

Bucky Harris, who had not been overly impressed with Weaver's pitching in that first inning, detained Weaver in the dugout and sent Syd Cohen out to pitch the rest of the game and Cohen began to do a nice job of it. He held the Injuns runless through the second, third, fourth and fifth innings and then the Nats suddenly reared up and banged four runs across the plate to bounce into a 6-3 lead.

It was all accompanied by a stroke of luck and some shoddy play by Second Baseman Johnny Kroner. The luck came in the form of Almada's drooping, broken-bat single to center. After Lewis forced Almada, Kroner got in his licks. He muffed Travis' line drive that loomed as a certain double play and then he made a second error, heaving the ball past Trosky at first. Lewis reached third on the double miscue and Travis got to second.

Whereupon Johnny Stone choked up on his bat and slapped a single through the box to score both his pals and put the Nats a run ahead. Myer followed with a single to right, but the big blow of the inning was reserved, though, for Al Simmons, who walloped a 430-foot three-bagger far, far over Averill's head to score Stone and Myer and make it 6-3.

Syd Goes Sour.

Then Cohen, who had been doing very well, started to go sour. He walked Trosky in the sixth and pitched a double to Solters, and the Indians had a run back. Simmons turned in a spectacular catch for him to keep Campbell off base, but Hale scored Solters with a single to center and only because he caught Sullivan's line drive and turned it into a double play was Cohen able to get the side out at all.

Cecil Travis helped the Injuns to tie the score at 6-6 in the eighth when he muffed Solters' grounder, but Cohen wasn't much help. He pitched a single to Campbell that Lewis infielded but couldn't throw and then he pitched a game-tying single to Sammy Hale.

Earl Whitehill and Dennis Galehouse relieved Hudlin, and against them the Nats were gone guys. Eventually came the ninth, and that is too, too sad to repeat.

Probable Pitchers.

Salisbury Sells Stars To Griffmen

To Report After Shore League Playoff; Two Are Pitchers.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 30.—Five key men who dragged the Salisbury Indians from last place to first-place contenders in the Eastern Shore League will report to the Washington Senators after the Shore League play-off series.

The Indians, dropped into the cellar by forfeiture of 21 games for playing ineligible men, scrambled back up to second place. Heading that drive were: Joseph Kohlman, pitcher with 22 straight victories; George Comellas, Cuban pitcher with 29 straight victories; Fermine (Mike) Guerra, fleet-footed Cuban catcher; Frank Treschock, shortstop and league-leading hitter; Jerome (Jerry) Lynn, second baseman who is runner-up to Treschock for batting honors.

They are the five signed by Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators. The price was reported to be $10,000.

Salisbury club officials said Griffith informed them Kohlman will start for the Senators against the Chicago White Sox September 19, with Guerra catching and Lynn and Treschock in the infield.

Miss Guilfoil Wins Mason-Dixon Medal

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 30 (AP).—Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., sloshed over a soaked course today to bag medal honors in the Mason-Dixon golf tournament with an 83 while heavy rains sent qualifying scores for the championship flight above 100.

Six over par on the outgoing nine, Miss Guilfoil found her touch even in the rain to card a perfect game coming in. Three strokes back trailed Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, the girl professional Helen Hicks picked to win.

Janet Younkers, of White Plains, N. Y., carded an 87 for third place medal honors, 1 stroke ahead of Sally Elson, of Columbus, Ohio.

Scranton's Mary Fine shot an 89 and Lois Rogers, of Parkersburg, was West Virginia's low scorer with a 93.

Other qualifying scores included Mrs. James H. Heim, Kane, Pa., 94; Mary Morrison, Hershey, Pa., 95; Betty Meckley, Washington, 92; Mrs. E. H. McFarland, Zanesville, Ohio, 100; Virginia Fon, Harrisburg, Pa., 96; Mrs. M. T. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio, 105; Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, Washington, 106; Mrs. S. M. Hottest Shot of Season Is Claimed by Golfer

Denver (AP).—Bob Warren, of Denver, claims credit for the "hottest" shot of the Colorado amateur golf tournament of this year.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX

Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers, and Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, running one-two in the American League batting race, both picked up ground yesterday, pulling farther away from third-place Joe DiMaggio. Each belted two-for-three, Gehringer climbing three points to .383 and Gehrig rising two to .369. All of the National League members of baseball's Big Six in hitting were idle.

The Fight by Rounds

By the Associated Press.

ROUND ONE.

They came slowly to the center of the ring. Farr poked two left jabs to the face and they clinched. Joe mussed Tommy's blond hair with a straight left. Farr did most of the leading and drove Louis to the ropes with a brisk flurry of punches to the head. Farr shot a hard right to the temple and followed with a light left to the body.

The champ missed twice with left counter punches, but scored with a half dozen left jabs to the face. Farr's nose and right eye reddened under punishment. Louis pumped his left to the face before being rushed to the ropes. Farr stuck his left to Joe's nose twice without a return. Tommy roughed Joe around the head as they went into a short clinch. Round even.

ROUND TWO.

Louis came out on his toes, but Farr made the first lead, forcing Joe to give ground as he connected with a left snappy hook to the head. Tommy moved in and out of range quickly, shifting his lead from the head to the body, while Louis sparred cautiously. They exchanged light lefts to the head, then Farr jabbed the champ three times to the face.

ROUND THREE.

Farr threw an overhand right that curled harmlessly around the champ's neck. Tommy then dug both hands to the head and jarred Louis with a choppy right to the head.

Louis missed twice with his left and they clinched in Farr's corner. They exchanged long lefts in mid-ring while Tommy tried hard to find an opening in the champ's defense. Joe continued to use his left jab almost exclusively. He was beating Tommy to the punch consistently.

Tommy lowered his head and charged in, landing a hard right to the body and grazing Joe's chin with another. Louis opened a deep gash under Farr's right eye. The crimson was flowing freely as Tommy went to his corner. Louis' round.

ROUND FOUR.

Farr connected with a short right to the chin but Joe did not even blink as he went methodically about his work. Louis speared Farr a half dozen times with his left without a return. Tommy kept on the move, meanwhile being wild with most of his counter punches.

ROUND FIVE.

Louis landed three light lefts to the head. Farr circled the champ in mid-ring. Tommy was short with both hands. Louis again began pumping his left to the challenger's face. The crowd became restive and whistled for more action.

Louis pulled away from a long right and shook Farr with a hard counter punch to the head. Tommy swung a hard right to Joe's head but took two terrific smashes in return. The challenger was bleeding from cuts under both eyes as Louis stalked him.

Joe dug his left to the body and forced Farr to retreat in some distress. The challenger gamely charged in, but Joe had no difficulty in tying him up as the bell rang. Louis' round.

ROUND SIX.

Farr backed off and carried his left shoulder high to help protect his chin. Tommy's left missfired but he connected with a short uppercut to the champ's chin. Joe blinked but quickly began jabbing and keeping his opponent off balance. Tommy threw caution to the winds as he leaped forward, punching with both hands. But escaped serious damage.

Tommy brought a roar from the crowd as he landed both fists to the jaw. The challenger was finding the range more often with his left and had the champ somewhat puzzled. Joe covered the next time Tommy rushed and made no attempt to counter punch. The crowd was cheering the challenger's rally wildly as the bell rang. Farr's round.

ROUND SEVEN.

Tommy roughed Joe as they leaned their heads together near the ropes. They exchanged short lefts to the head. Louis opened up and let drive with both hands. The champ beat his opponent unmercifully. Tommy's face was a bloody mask but he hung on gamely.

ROUND EIGHT.

Tommy circled the champ in mid-ring. They exchanged light lefts. Farr let fly with a roundhouse left that circled Joe's neck harmlessly. Tommy charged in twice, connecting with lefts, while Joe took his time and waited for an opening. The champ shifted to the body but then backed away as Tommy again charged forward.

Joe pumped his left to Tommy's face three times but Farr rallied and had Joe blinking with a series of hard smashes to the head. The crowd was in an uproar as the challenger carried the fight to the champ and staged another game rally. Tommy grinned at his handlers as they wiped the blood off his face. Farr's round.

ROUND NINE.

Tommy led briskly with his left as they met in the center of the ring. There was a slight swelling under the champ's right eye. Louis opened a fresh flow of blood from under the cut under his rival's left eye but Tommy retaliated with both hands hard to the head. Tommy forced Joe to give ground and punched the champion's body with both hands in a neutral corner.

Farr forced Louis to the ropes, where they clinched. Tommy kept throwing his left and was beating Joe frequently to the punch. Louis backed away after Farr landed both hands solidly to the face.

They exchanged light lefts in mid-ring just before the bell. Farr's round.

ROUND TEN.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Tommy charged Louis with both fists swinging. He drove the champion to a corner and connected with a hard right to the head before Joe countered with a snappy left hook. After sparring at a fast pace in mid-ring, Tommy let fly again with both hands and had Joe again in retreat just before the bell. Farr's round.

ROUND TWELVE.

Farr got in some effective punches with his left hand after narrowly escaping a terrific Louis right that h : haymaker written all over. They speared each other with lefts.

Farr's face was well smeared with blood again but the challenger repeatedly rushed forward as he continued to force the fight. Tommy landed a right hook to the champ's face just before the bell. Round even.

ROUND THIRTEEN.

They exchanged lefts to the face. Farr bobbed and weaved as he circled the champion in midring, drawing nothing more seriously than long lefts that he took mostly on top of the head.

Louis poured his left to Tommy's battered face as ringsiders cautioned the challenger to keep moving. Tommy chopped a right to the ear. Louis was short with a right but continued to pile up points with straight lefts and jabs. Louis cocked his right hand but Farr kept out of range. Tommy swung and connected with both hands to the chin just before the gong. Louis' round.

ROUND FOURTEEN.

ROUND FIFTEEN.

Farr came out in the center of the ring before the bell rang. Tommy connected with his left jab and outpunched the champ at close range. Farr charged in and forced Louis to cover. Joe jabbed twice, then gave ground and was belted around the head by the rugged and determined challenger.

Tommy fired both hands to the head before he was brought up short by a hard left hook. Blood poured from Farr's nose. They speared each other with left hands and Tommy clubbed the champ along the ropes as they clinched.

Farr tried hard to connect with long rights but was wild and took too many chances. Louis punished him about the face but Tommy had Louis giving ground as the final bell rang. Farr's round.

Fife Leads Way Home In Feature

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro Race Track, Aug. 30.—Fife, an 8-year-old mare with enough occasional speed to earn her oats in the small tracks, found conditions to her liking today and galloped off with the Colonial Hotel Purse, feature event of the program. Running easily and with her eyes pricking, Fife came down to the imaginary wire four lengths in front of a driving Seafinn. Easter Herald, one that set the pace most of the day, accounted for third money in a field reduced to six starters by scratches.

Fife had a heavy backing in the crowd of 3,000 and was given a well-judged ride by Jockey Gaither. The old mare broke poorly, but Gaither soon had her close to the pace of Easter Herald. He then took her under restraint and did not ask her for any real speed until the field had run a half mile. Then he turned loose and Fife responded by passing Easter Herald and going on to an easy victory.

Easter Herald, hard handled most of the way, was tiring at the finish and Seafinn sneaked up to win the place honors by a neck. Povel drew much play but lost her chances by being squeezed back soon after the break.

Fife paid a $7.20 mutuel and was clocked in 1:58 2-5 for the mile-and-a-sixteenth contest over a slow track.

Mrs. Arthur White's Never Cease, in the role of a $5.80 favorite, triumphed in convincing manner in the first race. Jockey Manny Berg followed the pace of Oteebee, took command when that one tired, and went on to bring the Ed Crump filly home with a four-length advantage over Hydrangea. Headgear won third money by a nose from La Joyeuse.

The customers made Malfreda and Shaggy Ann cofavorites in the second race, and the two fillies proved their backers right by battling it out to a nose decision. Malfreda, despite a poor start, came up to engage her rival in the stretch run and won by the narrowest of margins. Monocacy, always prominent, was third. Malfreda paid $5.80.

Packaway, excellently handled by Jockey Lou Pikor, lasted to win the third race by half a length. Keyed Up was charging on the $8 winner nearing the finish line. Aella was third after setting the pace most of the way. These three dominated the important running.

Another heavily played horse was the winner of the fourth event. With little Eddie Kilgore in the saddle, Square Play ran Poll Parrot into submission and then went on to score an easy victory. Clymene was up the final strides to take the show from Poll Parrot. Square Play, owned by C. Carver, paid a $6 mutuel.

Taunton came from far back to win the sixth race at a $7.70 mutuel. The big horse came through on the inside of the leaders entering the stretch and won by a length from Gee Sharp with Ranicilla third.

Best Policy won the finale at a $5.10 mutuel.

Dear Al:

If you believe picking winners is an easy task, read on. A certain trainer was standing by the rail the other day watching a race. In his hand he held a $10 ticket on a well-placed horse. In the same race, this trainer's own horse was a long shot. With the race about half over, the trainer saw that the horse he bet wasn't going to win, so he began rooting for his own horse, yelling, "Come on, ——, get that fourth money for me." Fourth money in the race amounted to $15. That would have allowed the trainer to break even—the $10 he bet and the $5 he was paying for the jockey fee. As if only to make the trainer look foolish, the discarded long-shot closed with a rush and won the race. A little later one of my scouts was passing the $5 win line and he heard a well-dressed man remark: "The trainer gave me that horse a week ago as the best thing of the meeting." If you don't think Pork Chop is busy, here's what he was doing this morning: Took ride on roads commission truck; helped rake sawdust in front of secretary's office; ran around the track with Jockey Pikor who was taking off weight; staged a wrestling match with police dog; held horse while stableman bought bottle of beer; let six people rub his head for good luck and would have liked to have touted Hydrangea in the first race but he couldn't pronounce it.

BILL.

First Race—Travelo seems to have a class edge on this field. Needs only a share of the racing luck to take down the main portion of the purse. Jim Cornell has a good figure and promises to do a lot of running here. Roan Canopy, a tip last out, got nothing. May do better then generally rated, however.

Second Race—Fernlin has been working fairly well and may get an off track. Meets only cheap ones in this field and has an excellent chance. I'm going to string along. Welsh Lad will draw a good play and is dangerous. Justa Jimmie is far down the list and will be a factor if in action.

Third Race—Lady Glascow will find this sprint more to her liking than last Saturday's distance affair. Gets in with a feather and should score. Lady Gurzil can better her last considerably. Miss Symphony to take care of the others.

Fourth Race—Crossing Over had none the best of it last out and with better luck will take this. Mabic Gift ran a much improved race in that most recent effort and, at the weight, will be a threat. Landsman should go well.

Fifth Race—Sylvia G closed like the wind in last Saturday's sprint feature. The race indicates that she will be hard to beat at this longer route. The Bond entry of Penway and Pencader is formidable. Threatening is in good shape and will not be far out of it.

Sixth Race—Nathan Hale has been very consistant of late. That recent win indicates that he likes the course and I see no reason for mistakes. Mint Bud, on an off track, would be hard to beat. Tom's Boy will be close if off alertly.

Seventh Race—Jim Brown was poorly ridden last out. Previous to that this one ran away from the same brand of opposition. Apathy was a good second in this race last Saturday and will be in the thick of contention. Balamcan figures right along with the top pair.

It's like money going up in smoke

when your GASOLINE BOILS AWAY

THE thermometer shows why. On hot days your fuel pump and carburetor get so hot that gasoline boils away—wasting money and mileage. This does not happen with Betholine—because it has a higher boiling point—above carburetor and fuel pump temperatures. Betholine does not boil away.

That's one reason why Betholine sales have more than tripled in the past two years. Another reason is that thousands of motorists have tested Betholine in their cars—and found that Betholine's premium performance actually costs no more per mile.

MAKE A MILEAGE TEST: Get a free Mileage Test Chart from your nearest Betholine Dealer. Compare Betholine mileage with the mileage you get from your present gasoline. You'll quickly discover that—

Extra Mileage makes up for the slight extra cost

Post Notes on FISHING

By Bill Ackerman.

The ladies just won't be denied the laurels in their invasion of man's age-old sport of angling. For several years now, they have been pushing well to the fore in the game, until the recent catches on successive days of giant tuna has pushed their records to within a few pounds of the North American record.

ACKERMAN

Press dispatches carried news of these two great catches, but few of them told of the trials and thrills of clearing the line when the great 760-pound bluefin fouled it around the anchor cable, or again when it ran under a net, great sections of which had to be cut away, both these operations being accomplished without touching her line, so that the catch of this fish, short of the record by only 19½ pounds, was perfectly legal and made in the short time of less than an hour by Mrs. William Chrisholm, of Cleveland.

The preceding day, Mrs. Earl Potter, of Brookville, Long Island, had brought to boat a 757-pound tuna that superseded the 749-pound fish of Mrs. Francis Low caught at Wedgeport last year.

A new method of deep trolling of a line baited with from 10 to 12 herring is the trick that seems to be just what it takes to bring the great fish to the surface, where, after they have taken the teaser, a hooked bait is put over, which is usually taken just as readily. This new trick seems to be resulting in the catches of larger fish than have ever been taken before.

Word comes from Capt. E. A. White at Yorktown that they have been catching a good many weakfish and that he looks for a good run of blues this month, because great shoals of bunkers have moved in under the shore. Almost in the same mail, a report from Messick, that they were getting plenty of small blues up to 2 pounds.

Reports right on the top of the northeaster late last week from widely separated points seemed to show that the shoals of weaks had broken up and were feeding on the grass flats under the shore. At Piney Point, Capt. L. M. Spriggs hit them wonderfully well two evenings in succession trolling just across the Point and on the inside. As mixed as a plaid shawl, blues up to 2 pounds, weaks and rock up to 5. The following evening was definately off, probably due to the fact that we rambled down to see what it was all about. A round dozen of blues and rock, none over 2 pounds, was the most we could snake out of the flock.

The trip wasn't wholly lost however, for we ran across a place to stay that was delightfully different. Made to order for the fisherman, with breakfast anytime from 4 a. m. on, lunch if you want to take it with you and dinner at just whatever time you get in and a bed that will never be disrespectfully spoken of later. Other anglers have found it, because reservations are very much in order. Try Poes cottage next time you are down that way.

A 14 mile run over to Milltown on the west shore of the Patuxent, a 20 minute trip on the ferry and we were in Solomons. Looked over several catches of big hardheads and weaks that come in on George Bowen's boats, argued pro and con, the advisability of bringing fresh chum up from Reedville for the Fishing Fair, with Edgar Bowne, and which, from the troubles experienced last year, seems to be almost impossible, for no matter how well the bunkers are iced at Reedville the bottom ones are bad when they get to Solomons.

Then a fact that seems to stop everything—that it is seldom in this section that bluefish are to be caught by chumming; trolling accounting for the best catches that have ever been made. So anglers, if you still want to use this method, it will be necessary to carry your own chum down with you.

A little chat with Capt. Harry Woodburn, whose boats have been returning fairly good catches since the bad weather, before we had a regular belly-laugh at Capt. Allen Shores, of Joe Lore's fleet, who one day last week, when fishing seemed hardly worth while, went ashore under Cove Point and went in swimming, only to see the largest shoal of blues he has run across in many a moon raise and play merry hob until he could get back aboard and going, when they went down.

If the several shoals of blues ever do get to striking just right, that are laying around between Cedar and Cove points, there is bound to be plenty of sport, even though the individual fish are small—between two and four pounds.

On up to JoAnn in Rockhold Creek on Herring Bay, and we find out just what so many others have, when they occasionally get the idea that the grass looks greener in the other fellow's yard, that all through the week the weakfish had been biting at trolled lures in the manner that is to be expected of them at this time of the year. The one thing that has the fishermen crossed up here is their failure to bite on bait, bottom fishing, but there is little doubt but what that will come next week with the new moon and continue until it is full.

Pound nets in this section are having capacity lifts daily and most of them are weaks. One of Noah Hazzard's, near Cedarhurst, last week lifted a small tarpon. If we keep on getting Florida's fish in this bay section of ours, it won't be long before we will be looking for the weather to go with them.

Wirephoto: A Left Hook to the Welshman's Jaw

Louis Wins Fight

series of them. At the end of the round the old cut under his right eye had been opened and a new one had been slit under his left. But they were under his eyes—and did little damage, except make him seem like some person from another world.

Louis remained cool and calculating through the third and fourth, measuring his opponent and letting one fly. But too often the Louis eye misjudged and too often the blow fell short or went over the Welshman's bobbing, weaving head.

Reopens Cuts.

Louis begins raining rights in these two rounds—unusually effective rights. They catch Farr under the eyes again and again. Farr's wounds reopen and the champion seems to have him well on the way. Joe's lefts are handing out punishment, searing, torturing punishment.

The champion continues his mode of operations during the sixth. He is plainly working up to the kill. But Farr comes back. He is blinded by gore and his knees rock with every punch he takes, but he comes back. Farr looks tired, but ducks and weaves and grimaces. He grimaces a horrible, unearthly grin, and sends two good lefts to Joe's stomach. Joe can't take it there. He winces. He isn't hurt—but those punches to the stomach aren't doing any good.

Then came the eventful seventh. The round of "might have been." Louis led with three terrible, devastating lefts. He follows them up with a succession of withering body punches, hooks, jabs, uppercuts. He pushes the bobbing, weaving Farr into a corner. Tom's face is a mask of blood, his eyes narrow, sullen slits that seemed to defy his fate. Louis sinks two mutilating rights in Farr's midsection and follows up with a succession of powerful lefts and rights. But Farr doesn't fall. He stands there grinning, and the bell rings. He pats Joe on the back and goes back to his corner and the hurried ministrations of his handlers.

This was the psychological turning point of the fight for the champion. This man couldn't be knocked out. Nothing the champion could do, no punch he could land, no strategem he could use would flatten this stubborn Welshman. Joe had his chance and fate and a rugged miner made him lose it. If the fight was to be won, it would be a decision. And Joe wasn't sure of that right now.

That seventh round setback didn't do the champion any good in the succeeding rounds. Farr straightened him up with a one-two in the eighth. Farr rained rights and lefts in this eighth. And Joe's knees buckled under him. Every writer in the press row noticed it. The champion's knees buckled under the force of blows thrown by a man almost on the floor two minutes ago—it was unbelievable.

Fight Slows.

The last five rounds were slow, slowed down by ten rounds of furious fighting. The edge was decidedly the champion's, but a mighty narrow edge it was. Farr, the man who wouldn't be licked, dogged the champion throughout those last closing rounds. If Joe were to win, it would be a tight victory. And a Pyrrhic victory it was—the thunderous boo of the multitude is probably still ringing in the champion's ears.

On The Post's score sheet, Louis took the third, fourth, fifth, seventh, tenth, thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth. Farr was given the first two, the sixth, eighth, the ninth and the twelfth. The eleventh was called even. It was easily the slowest round of the fight, with both fighters weighted down by the weight of the battle.

In the twelfth, Farr had the crowd with him and he knew it. They stood and shouted to him. "Knock him out, Tommy!" "Hit him again!" "It's your fight, Tommy!" The Welshman is easily the second most popular fighter in the United States today, the first, of course—being Mr. Max Schmeling.

The thirteenth fourteenth and fifteenth rounds slowed down to a waltz. Both boys were too tired to play any more. It was long past bedtime and they were weary. Louis' right eye was almost closed. His nose was a strawberry red. His stomach showed a battered red under the ruddy brown.

Miss Marble, Budge Rated Top Players

New York, Aug. 31.—Carrot-topped Don Budge and Blonde Alice Marble, America's ace racquet-wielders, had best sharpen up their garden tools. They've been given some tough rows to hoe.

Don, the uncrowned king of U. S. courts, and Alice, the acknowledged queen, have been seeded at the top of the domestic ranking lists for the National Singles championships which open at Forest Hills on Thursday afternoon and, with favorable weather, will get down to the finals on Saturday, September 11.

But facing them in their march to the titles are the strongest and most representative international fields ever to enter the lists.

Budge, hoping to add his native crown to the laurels already won at Wimbledon and in the Davis Cup struggles, will have to crack down on the No. 1 and No. 2 players of Germany, the No. 2 player of France, the No. 2 of England, and the No. 1 of Japan in the field of 100.

Alice, San Francisco lass who last year supplanted Helen Jacobs after the latter's four-year reign, will stack up against national champions from Chile and Poland, as well as ranking stars from France, Germany, England and Canada.

17 Men Are Seeded.

Seventeen players, besides Budge, were seeded for the men's division, with a domestic list of eight, a foreign group of ten. Behind the California cannon-baller in the United States ranking come Bobby Riggs, Frankie Parker, Bryan M. "Bitsy" Grant, Joe Hunt, Hal Surface, John McDiarmid and Johnny Van Ryn—occupants of seven of the first eleven places in the 1936 national rankings.

Heading the foreign contingent, and seeded at the bottom of the lower half of the draw, while Budge is at the head of the upper half, is Baron Gottfried von Cramm, the blond German, rated second only to the Wimbledon champion among the world's amateurs. Both drew first-round byes.

After von Cramm come Henner Henkel, his Davis Cup mate; Jiro Yamagishi, Japanese No. 1; Charles Edgar Hare, giant young English southpaw No. 2; Yvon Petra, who holds the same ranking in France; Fumituru Nakano and Hideo Nishimura, of Japan; Jacques Brugnon, French veteran; C. M. Jones, of England, and Ross Wilson, of Canada.

Miss Jacobs comes next to Miss Marble in the United States Women's list of eight, followed by Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, diminutive brunette from Cambridge, Mass., who won the national doubles with Miss Marble; Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex.; Gracyn Wheeler, Dorothy May Bundy, Carolin Babcock and Helen Pedersen.

Polish Girl Favored.

Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, husky, free-swinging Polish girl who was Wimbledon runner-up and has scored over Miss Marble several times this year, is seeded No. 1 on the foreign contingent and in the same half of the draw with Miss Jacobs. Anita Lizana, of Chile; Kay Stammers, of England; Marie Luise Horn, of Germany; Ruth Mary Hardwick, of England; Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, and Freda James and Margot Lumb, of England, follow her in that order.

If form holds true, Budge and

Tigers Win 5-4 Victory Over Yanks

York Hits 16th Home Run of Month; Lefty Gomez Is Loser.

Detroit, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Tigers' two long-range cannons, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, started things off, and Charley Gehringer wound them up as the Detroits downed the New York Yankees, 5 to 4, today for an even break in the abbreviated series.

Greenberg belted homer No. 30 with a mate on base in the first inning, and Roundhouse Rudy walloped No. 28 with the bases empty right after him. But it was a single by Charley Gehringer, scoring Gerry Walker from second in the seventh, that really won the ball game.

The defeat shaved the Yanks' American League lead to 11½ games and ended the three-game winnning streak of Lefty Gomez, who was tagged for all the Tiger tallies before he gave way to Monte Pearson in the seventh.

Elden Auker went the route for the Tigers, although he was touched for 13 hits. Six of these came in a bunch in the third inning and gave the Yanks all their runs. Thereafter Auker was tight enough to pitch shutout ball with men on the bags.

York's homer was his sixteenth of this month, giving him a chance in tomorrow's game to tie or break Babe Ruth's all-time high of 17 for a 30-day period. The Bambino belted his record total in September of 1927 as he wound up his record-smashing season for a total of 60 homers in one campaign.

Gomez lost the game as early as the first inning, for almost with the first ball pitched it was apparent the Tigers had his number. A walk to Gehringer set up two runs for Greenberg's homer over the left-field wall. York then put his in the lower rightfield stands for the third run. In the second inning, again with two out, Auker doubled and Walker singled him home.

The Yanks tied it up in their half when they batted around, but Gomez couldn't hold the fort. In the seventh, Walker opened with a double and came racing in with the winning run on Gehringer's single.

TommyFarr, Near Tears; FoughtWell

Eye Cuts Make Fight an Effort for the Challenger.

By Gayle Talbot.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 30.—Tommy Farr, peering from beneath slits of eyes and almost crying as they cut the bandages from his injured right hand, refused stoically to alibi his defeat or take issue with the decision that enabled Joe Louis to retain his title tonight.

"I couldn't see him toward the last," he said between puffed lips. "But I came here to give them a go, and I did, didn't I?" he pleaded with the score of reporters and handlers who crowded about him in the dressing room.

"You sure did, Tommy," soothed his manager, Ted Broadribb, who for the first time since they reached America, looked like he almost was fond of his battered fighter.

"What do I think of the decision?" Tommy repeated slowly after his questioner. "Well, I won't say anything about the decision. I'll leave that to you fellows. And please don't say much about this finger. I don't want them to think I tried to alibi."

Two Deep Cuts.

Two deep cuts were under Tommy's right and another an inch long beneath the left, tokens of the scores of rapier lefts with which Louis piled up his winning margin. It was an obvious effort for him to hold his eyes open enough to see.

"Gosh, but Joe is a great puncher," he said, fingering the mouse on his left cheek. "I don't know whether he's the hardest hitter I ever fought. But he hits hard enough. He hurt me a couple of times, but I never was close to being knocked out. They don't knock out Tommy Farr. I game them a go, didn't I? I would like another chance at him."

"We're not fighting for anybody but Mike Jacobs," he declared firmly. "He's been fair with us, and we keep our contracts." Farr, preparing wearily for a shower, nodded assent.

"All them experts," chortled Jacobs. "Remember what they said Louis was going to do with Farr?"

Farr returned to his nearby hotel only long enough to change clothes before motoring back to his camp at Long Branch, N. J., for the night. He is going to stick around here for at least another month, he said, waiting to see what Jacobs wants him to do.

Ex-Nat Catcher Bought by Boston

Boston, Aug. 30 (U.P.)—Purchase of Catcher John Riddle, 30, of the Indianapolis Club of the American Association by the Boston Bees in a straight cash transaction was announced tonight by Club Secretary John Quinn.

Reportedly purchased for $1,000, Riddle will report to the Bees, September 12, at the close of the American Association season. Though he had a brief tryout with the Washington Senators earlier this year, he was returned to the minor league club. Riddle has batted .336 this season.

"We were not any worse than we were at Wimbledon," Budge explained. "The baron and Henner were just too good for us."

Lanky Don's explanation, however, did not coincide with the facts revealed by the recapitulation of the stroke analysis, which placed the onus on Mako for the American team's crushing defeat.

Great Britain Arms for Peace Economist Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Montreal, Aug. 30.—Dr. Donald M. Marvin, economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, has just returned from an extended visit to Europe, and in the September bank letter he points out that Europeans consider the rearmament of Great Britain and the continued recovery in the United States as the major factors governing the immediate trend of events.

"British rearmament has brought hope that an interval of peace will afford an opportunity to continue reconstruction," he says. "Continued expansion of business in the United States, accompanied by a moderate reduction in tariffs, is releasing new purchasing power and constitutes a positive stimulus making for further improvement. In spite of the situation in Spain, in spite of labor troubles in France, and in the face of a fairly widespread fear of war, progress is being achieved.

"In no European country, no matter what the form of government, is the sentiment of the general public favorable to war. To a degree unknown on this side of the Atlantic the desire for peace is a passion with the public in every part of Europe. It is a subject closer to the hearts of the general public in Europe than it is in North America because of the pervasive fear that neighboring countries will make peace impossible. Understanding of the almost intolerable economic conditions prevailing in neighboring countries creates the fear that such conditions will become so bad that war will be inevitable.

European Standards.

"In a number of European countries standards of living are at a minimum, further repression is dangerous and any reversal of the present upward trend would be politically dangerous. Yet, fear leads to illogical actions, it leads countries into acts of repression or aggression, which make them bad neighbors. Fear is of itself dangerous and destructive.

"In over-populated Europe good land is scarce and per capita natural resources are limited and they are, therefore, more precious than in countries less seriously over-populated. Again and again armies of neighboring countries have swept over the land, sparing neither homes, shrines, nor works of art. It is against this background that rearmament in Great Britain takes on a new aspect not fully understood on this side of the Atlantic Throughout Europe there is fairly general recognotion that the prime objective of Great Britain is the maintenance of peace and the perpetuation of those conditions mist favorable to international trade.

"With some reservations on the part of those who may be temporarily in opposition to some of the immediate aims of British policies, the rearmament of Great Britain is accepted as an indication that any action tending to upset the peace of Europe will be effectively opposed. Most of Europe breathes easier because recent diplomatic messages from London have that firm note of a country which is no longer uncertain."

Donald M. Marvin, Ph.D.

American-born economist of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Stock Issues Lead in July

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities totaling $266,886,000 become fully effective during July. The comparable figures for the preceding month and for the same month of 1036 are $369,065,000 and $362,925,000, respectively.

Registrations during the month were for the largest part for preferred and common stock issues, and the chief registrants were the manufacturing companies. The issuers estimated that they would obtain approximately $144,000,000 from the immediate cash sale of the securities registered for their account. They further indicated that they proposed to apply 42.6 per cent of this amount toward the repayment of indebtedness; 29.0 per cent for "new" money purposes (13.2 per cent for plant and equipment and 15.8 per cent for additional working capital) and 23.2 per cent for the purchase of securities of other companies for investment.

The financial and investment companies accounted for securities with estimated gross proceeds of $43,771,000, or 21.3 per cent of the total, while the electric, gas and water utility companies registered securities with estimated gross proceeds of $35,167,000, or 17.1 per cent.

Corn Climbs 3c Per Bushel For September

Wheat Rallies Sharply on Short Covering After Slump.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—After dipping to the lowest level in more than a year, wheat prices rallied strongly just before the close today and wiped out all of the day's losses.

Short covering brought about the final upward spurt. This buying was based partly on a good recovery at Winnipeg and on outstanding strength of September corn, which shot up almost 4 cents from an early low and closed at more than 3 cents net gain for the day.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stock Tone Is Firmer With Steel Leading in Light Turnover; Bonds Quiet.

New York, Aug. 30.—Stock turnover scarcely reached the half-million share mark in one of the dullest days of the year, but the firmer tone in shares helped to take away the sting for professional Wall Street market operators. Closing prices were fractions to a point or two higher in the majority of stocks and around the best of the day, but the market could stand no large dealings in any stock. Sterling declined further, a seasonal movement at this time, but it rallied on what was said to be sales of dollars for silver metal. September wheat closed with a rise of half a cent to $1.04½ a bushel.

If only out of a spirit of contrariness the stock market demonstrated its occasional ability to advance in nearly all sections without the aid of much activity. The buying may have been short covering against the possibility of a livelier time after next week, or it may have been bull preparations for an advance—that is, the "technical" rally as generally produced by the brokerage houses. The natural leaders of the industrial stocks kept in front.

Steel common opened up a fraction and by late afternoon had recovered to above 110, a figure which seems to be a marker. Chrysler also worked higher and General Electric hardened. Farm implements were mostly higher. Case rose 3 points, but Caterpillar dropped that many. Oliver, Harvester and Deere climbed a fraction each. Westinghouse, Youngstown Steel, Walgreen, Worthington, Commercial Credit, Douglas, Eastman and Libby Owens Ford were among the common stocks to advance 1 to 2 points.

Rail Shares.

Railroad shares looked less apathetic. Santa Fe was a favorite on a good crop survey. Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Union Pacific and Great Northern were nudged up a fraction to a point. Pennsylvania stayed on a siding. Pere Marquette found the bottom 4½ points lower when some one offered a handful of stock. Chesapeake & Ohio sold at its low for the year and then rallied a fraction. Railroad equipments were stagnant.

The financial district concerned itself over the week-end mainly with speculation on how dull the week before the holidays might prove to be and many of them helped to make it dull by staying away. Little in the news demanded attention from the absentees. The war developments in China were by no means reassuring, but the conviction seems to be widely held that almost nothing short of a sustained attack by the Japanese on armed forces of the United States and Great Britain would involve them in war in that part of the world.

Year Ago.

Business on the Stock Exchange was more active a year ago than it is today, but otherwise the picture was about the same. Turnover in stocks was 1,500,000 shares. September wheat was selling at 109 cents, against about 104 cents now on an immensely larger crop. Stocks generally were firm, with some play in the airplanes and a fall in the silvers. Radio was selling around 12. Railroad stocks did well, and in August they advanced 4 per cent on rising traffic. The Government was spending money on a heroic scale (it being an election summer), and short term money was firmer. The feature of the month was the huge dividend distrbutions, in anticipation of the undistributed profits tax, but this year the tendency is to wait a while. Some talk was heard about drought effects, and a letter writer to The Sun said he couldn't see how anyone could possibly be bullish, with "10,000,000 more people going on relief this winter and the Government obliged to appropriate three billions more for relief." Fortunately that prophecy didn't come true. Incidentally, a year ago, denials were being sent from Spain that any American property was being damaged or confiscated. This summer the Japs don't bother to deny anything.

Furniture Slump.

Several weeks ago enthusiastic accounts were written over the great activity and good prospects of the furniture industry, but the outlook seems to have turned sour. Seidman & Seidman, the accountants, found July business showing much less than the seasonal rise. The fall is accounted for by a number of causes, principally the drop in new home building. That factor also accounts for slackness in many other industries, and may be cited as a prime illustration of the fallacy of the theory that higher wages in themselves promote prosperity. Higher wages in building construction have been and are so steep as to choke off construction, so that less money goes to the building trades.

Railroads.

The outlook for the railroad security holder probably was never poorer, on long view. Although most roads are failing to cover fixed charges, or are doing so with great difficulty, the press for higher wages, merely to take advantage of a strategical position, goes on. Many railroad executives long ago took a defeatist attitude toward wages, and few of them are ready to try a strike contest with the unions. They might have won the last time wages were lifted, but this time the roads doubtless would be forced to give in by the Government. In any event, many persons in Government employ would welcome an opportunity to bring Government ownership and operation to a head. That is also just what more and more railroad security owners would like to see happen. If costs of railroad operation are to be increased substantially, Government ownership is the only alternative to all-'round bankruptcy, for rates and fares can't force more traffic to move over the rails.

Flags.

Flags were flying at half-mast over the Clearing House and some of the banks in memory of Albert A. Tilney, president of the Clearing House, who died in Canada last Friday. The death of the former Secretary of the Treasury caused no flutter in the flag that hung motionless in the fog at the top of the pole of the old Sub Treasury Building.

For the benefit of those with the desire to keep informed on the recent developments in banking practice and administration, studies of an advanced and specialized nature are also available. The intent of the institute study courses is not only to provide an opportunity to acquire a knowledge of banking and allied activities, but also to broaden the outlook of its students with respect to business generally.

Washington Chapter was formed in 1901 by a small group of young bankers, most of whom are leaders in their profession today. The chapter's history has been marked by gradual but consistent growth in membership and educational participation. Its leaders have continually endeavored to increase its value by enlarging its curriculum and improving its standards of instruction.

Financial Advertisers.

One of the features of the convention of the Financial Advertisers Association at Syracuse, N. Y., September 13-16, will be projection of advertising displays on a stereopticon screen for the benefit of the essembled delegates. This is part of the annual program dealing with the publicity, advertising and public relations mission of the association.

At previous meetings delegates had to make an inspection tour of the individual exhibits. This year photographic reproductions of the displays will be thrown on a screen while the delegates, comfortably seated, will hear Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers Association and publisher of the Southern Banker, explain the aims and objectives of the displays.

Eliot H. Thomson, publicity manager of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., member of the advertising committee of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and a delegate to the convention, reports that Preston E. Reed, executive vice president of the Financial Advertisers Association, states the exhibits this year will constitute the largest display in the history of the organization.

Mr. Thomson reminds that members of the association appreciate the fact that great changes have occurred in the thoughts, ideas and ideals of persons within the past five years, and that the program of

Bob Burns Says—

My Grandpaw Pelican Snelson use'ta be a judge down home and he didn't hardly have no education at all to amount to nothin'. He got himself one of them big mail order catalogues and when he found a prisoner guilty, he'd turn the catalogue over and look on the page and then he'd pronounce the fine.

One day, he found a fella guilty of disturbin' the peace and he looked in the catalogue and he says, "$4.98—and you'll work it out on the road at 25 cents a day." The prisoner complained to his lawyers that that was a pretty heavy fine and it would take him a long time to work out that $4.98. The lawyer says, "Well, you don't know how lucky you are. If the judge had looked in the automobile section instead of the pants section, you'd been workin' the rest of your life!"

New England Inquiry Fails to End Vote Fight

Method of Recounting Roy and Jenks Ballots Is Attacked.

By the Associated Press.

Newton, N. H., Aug. 30.—A Congressional committee tonight ended its inquiry into the disputed First District election, but controversey over whether Republican Arthur B. Jenks or Democrat Alphonse Roy should hold the Unite States Representative post continued.

"We have finished the job we were sent here to do," said Charles A. Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey.

"We have established that 458 persons, and not 424, voted. There remains no question of the right of Jenks to hold the seat in Congress as Representative of the First Congressional District."

Awarded the post by the State ballot commission after several recounts, Jenks served last session despite efforts to unseat him.

"The issue," countered Roy's counsel tonight, "is not how many persons voted in Newton in the last election, but rather how many votes were cast for Representative here."

Roy has contended that only 424 votes were cast for Representative. Jenks has maintained there were 458 cast.

Voters were asked only, "Did you vote November 3?"

As the Congressmen left this town after hearing 447 of its citizens answer yes to that question, Acting Committee Chairman Ben Craven (Democrat), of Arkansas, said the committee's report, accompanied by specific recommendations, would be submitted to the next session of the National House of Representatives.

Five absentee voters and three ill persons have still to be accounted for. They will be visited by a subcommittee.

Last witness of the day was Secretary of State Enoch Fuller, who said seals and wrappers for the ballots were not saved, although so required by law, after delivery at the State House.

He testified "half a dozen or more" janitors had access to the room where the ballots were left opened on a table during a recount as officials went to meals.

He said there was a discrepancy of 34 ballots in the count, his figures showing 424 votes and town figures showing 458.

Aberhart to Defy CanadaonBanking

Edmonton, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—Premier Aberhart today challenged the right of the federal government to kill provincial legislation and announced he will enforce recently enacted Alberta banking laws.

The federal Canadian government held the laws invalid, contending they exceeded authority of the provincial government.

Premier Aberhart, in a letter to Prime Minister Mackenzie King of the federal government, declared his intention to enforce the laws. His reason, the Alberta social credit leader asserted, is that Alberta must "proceed rapidly to end poverty and starvation in this province."

Writer Has Secret Wedding (Except for a Lot of Reporters)

Paul Y. Anderson, Washington correspondent, smiles at Miss Katherine Lane just before the wedding yesterday. He wanted to keep it a secret but . . .

Paul Y. Anderson, 44, Washington newspaperman who gained national renown by printing many things that some people wanted kept secret, yesterday tried to keep a secret of his own from the papers—and failed.

He wanted to be married secretly. And newspaper cameramen and reporters were the chief, certainly the most numerous witnesses, to his intoning of "I do."

Anderson, the reporter who crashed the Teapot Dome scandal story and took a Pulitzer Prize for his pains, was married to Miss Katherine Lane, 26, a willowy brunette who has done Shakespeare behind the footlights with Walter Hampden, and thereon hangs a pretty little romance of some two months' duration.

The story should be begun with Miss Lane. A native of Alhambra, Calif., she was graduated from the University of Southern California and then, in the words of her husband, "she got stage struck."

Going to New York, she was playing with Hampden within six months. Then radio attracted her talents and the Columbia Broadcasting Co. engaged her. Now, in those times, Anderson was exposing things in Washington, as a correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He seized upon the Memorial Day labor riot in Chicago and took it apart in a lengthy and revealing piece of news writing.

Anderson was invited to Atlantic City to receive a gold medal from the National Headliners Club for his story. The Headliners Club wanted some first-rate entertainment for the occasion and Miss Lane came from New York to play the schoolmistress in a dramatization of the New London, Tex., schoolhouse explosion.

Anderson saw her.

Now it was quiet yesterday afternoon at the rsidence of George R. Holmes, 2338 Massachusetts avenue. It didn't seem like anything was about to take place there. But someone who came to the door said that it was a little too bad that anyone had called. For, after all, Mr. Anderson wanted the marriage to be a secret.

In a quiet drawing room Justice F. Dickinson Letts sat, like a man with an interesting anticipation. Outside the reporters and photographers sat. One of them said: "Here comes Anderson, now."

In a faultless linen suit, black tie and sporty shoes he stepped from an automobile and gave his arm to Miss Lane.

"You've got me," he said to the reporters; "you've got me, and I give up."

Justice Letts performed the marriage, which was Anderson's third and Miss Lane's first. The bride wore—well, the few ladies present were too busy congratulating Anderson to explain what the bride wore. But outside, the reporters and photographers decided on a white knitted afternoon frock that seemed very stylish and appropriate.

Veterans Urge U. S. Control Of Munitions

V. F. W. Session Also Asks Strict Neutrality and Effective Defense.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 30.—A volley of peace pleas bombarded the Nation's Veterans of Foreign Wars today as the former warriors opened their thirty-eighth encampment.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, fired the heaviest projectile when he called for "legislation—now—which takes the profit out of any future war."

With him stood National Commander in Chief Bernard F. Kearney, of Gloversville, N. Y., who asked his aging army comrades to get behind an eight-point program that included "Federalizing" the arms industry.

These sentiments caught a prompt echo when the organization's national defense committee proposed:

"Peace for America by taking the profit out of war . . . by Government control of munitions, by strict neutrality and by a more effective national defense."

The women's auxiliary felt the peace plea barrage when Mrs. Winifred D. Toussaint, of Jersey City, announced that James Levergood, 17, of Union, N. J., had won a gold medal and $100 for his essay on international amity.

Delegates cheered Senator Vandenberg as he said he was "speaking for new rules which will take the dollar signs off our battle flags forever."

Work to Continue On Mellon Gallery

Although Andrew W. Mellon, its donor, and John Russell Pope, the architect, died within 24 hours of each other last week, work on the National Art Gallery here will continue on schedule, the Associated Press reported last night from New York.

Construction of the gallery will be directed by Daniel Paul Higgins and Otto R. Eggers, sr., Pope's associates in his architectural firm for 30 years.

The gallery, located on the Mall just southeast of the Archives Building, is not expected to be formally opened for about two years.

Pole Electrocutes Boy At School Flag Raising

Midland, Mich., Aug. 30 (AP).—One pupil was killed and two injured today at a flag-raising ceremony opening the Barnes rural school for the fall term.
